BENGASI FALLS BEFORE BRITISH

By EDWARD KENNEDY

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 7 (AP)—Bengasi, Italy's last big stronghold in eastern Libya, has been captured, British general headquarters announced today.

The British now claim control of all eastern Libya, with Italian forces there capitulating or fleeing Bengasi, military and naval base and provincial capital in a territory which Italy regards as a part of herself, was taken yesterday by British forces which cut through a blinding sandstorm to strike at the city from two directions.

After skirting the Jebel el Akdar range on the inland side, to the east, British armed forces, including swift Bren gun carriers, armored cars and tanks, knifed across the main coastal highway south of Bengasi and straddled that road while Australian assault troops lunged against the city's defenses on the northeast.

3500 PRISONERS TAKEN

The first communique on the victory said merely:

"Bengasi is in our hands."

A later communique gave the plan of attack. This communique, reporting on other African fronts, said in part that more than 3500 prisoners had been taken on the British advance into Eritrea, Italian East Africa.

At Bengasi, about 1500 miles northwest of the Eritrean battle front, the Italians were said to have been "demoralized and outmaneuvered" and "unable to put into effect their plans for defense." Bengasi and that region had been heavily bombed by the RAF in recent days.

This was the 61st day of a British offensive which started out as a tentative effort to drive the Italians out of Egypt, which they had penetrated more than 70 miles along the coast.

Now the British offensive has carried about 350 miles into Libya. Bengasi is the second of Libya's provincial capitals to fall. Derna fell a week ago.

Some British circles have said the biggest and, as they put it, final Italian stand probably would be made in defense of Tripoli, capital of Libya. Tripoli is about

Tinkham Loses Tilt To Ban Aid to Reds; U. S. Planes Flayed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—Action on the lease-lend bill pushed forward in both Houses of Congress. While Rep. George Holden Tinkham in the House lost a fight to include in the measure a ban on arms for Russia, and a House vote on passage neared, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee heard more witnesses in opposition to the bill.

SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—Maj. Al Williams, former Navy speed flier, said today United States armed forces have no single-seater fighting plane that can "hold a candle" to the British and German pursuit ships clashing in combat over England today.

Williams, opposing the Administration lease-lend bill before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, asserted this country's air forces were being "stripped" of planes needed for the secondary training of pilots because such ships were being turned over to Great Britain.

After Williams testified Chairman George (D.) of Georgia placed in the record a letter from Secretary Stimson saying the War Department expected "accelerated deliveries" to the Army of the latest type of combat planes "within four to six months."

Stimson's letter went into the record only after Senators Gillette (D.) of Iowa, Johnson (R.) of California and Clark (D.) of Missouri had protested the secretary was being permitted to make an additional statement without subjecting himself to cross-examination.

The United States, Williams said,

HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—After writing into the British aid bill a second prohibition against use of convoys, the House refused today to exclude Soviet Russia from countries for which defense materials might be produced.

By a teller vote of 185 to 94, the House defeated an amendment by Rep. George Holden Tinkham (R.) of Massachusetts, making Russia the only specific exception among nations "whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States" and which conceivably could be provided with military equipment from the United States.

Tinkham argued that "Stalin's hands, if anything, are more bloody than Hitler's" and that this country should do nothing which might place weapons in the hands of Russia.

OPPOSED BY McCORMACK

He became so aroused during his argument that he frequently left the microphone in the well of the House and members kept shouting "mike!" to get him back to the amplifier.

Rep. Luther Johnson (D.) of Texas, opposing the amendment, declared that it would be "merely a gratuitous slap at a country which is not a part" of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

Rep. McCormack (D.) of Massachusetts, the majority leader,

RAF Fires 3 Big Nazi Invasion Ports

LONDON, Feb. 7 (AP)—Large fires were started in dock areas at Boulogne, Dunkirk and Dieppe by British bombers which attacked German invasion ports last night, the air ministry announced.

Harbor facilities at Calais and Fecamp also were reported bombed, despite bad weather conditions.

"At Dieppe," the air ministry news service declared, "a number of brisk fires were started which suddenly went out in a manner which suggested that barges had burned down to the water line and then sunk."

Boulogne was said to have been heavily attacked for about two hours beginning at 7 o'clock in the evening.

"At Dunkirk the clouds were thicker, but pilots saw their bombs burst near barges and shipping, and incendiaries started some fires," the announcement said.

"At Fecamp the railway and the eastern end of the docks were hit in clear weather, and at Calais, where attacks were made from a low level, explosions were observed in warehouses beside the dock."

One British plane was reported missing.

A low-flying German plane machine-gunned a shopping street in a northeast Scottish town today and injured one person after dropping several bombs.

Another raider bombed an East Anglian town today, causing some casualties. It was reported shot down later by anti-aircraft guns.

U. S. FLEDGLING IS TRAINED AS WARBIRD BY CANADIANS

By AUSTEN LAKE

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7—Winter settles early in Canada—marrow-chilling, skin-blistering winter which turns the blood to syrup and the skin to cordovan. So, when Steve Murray arrived in London, Ont., for his Elementary Flying Training, he found a bleak stretch of wind-rippled snow, crusted hard as corrugated concrete.

There were precise rows of mustard-colored huts ranged like warehouses beside big, glass-veiled arks which housed the training ships. Sentries in wind-proof canvas pajamas and fur-trimmed parkas paced their posts like Arctic explorers.

But mostly Steve was fascinated by the tiny, yellow Fleet Finches and De Haviland Tiger Moths—frail, gnat-like planes with a 60 m.p.h. cruising speed and a soft, elderdown way of setting their wheels on the ground. For these are the dual place, twin-control "kiddy-kites" so familiar to amateur, modest-priced aeronautics in the U. S. and which now the RCAF uses to give novice pilots their first feel of live air and the throbbing shudder of upper space.

ELEMENTARY WORK

Steve and his 200 classmates itched to get their fingers on the Finch throttles. But they found there were weeks of tedious elementary ground work to be done before they drew their pilots' gear—modified ski suits, 'chutes, helmets with fitted phones, gloves, fleece-lined galoshes, goggles. First there were grubby sessions of assembly work on dummy aero engines and on tiny plane models; grimy work in repair shops and boresome lectures on ignition, combustion, thermal dynamics, stresses, torsions, geometric force, topography and theoretical reconnaissance.

Steve said he found it equal to any high pressure college curriculum at Indiana U. with less and less leisure in the town areas of London, England was pleading distantly, "Hurry! Hurry!" so the Air Office had stepped up the course to cram 26 weeks of intensive work into 21—a double advantage of hurrying the pilot supply and weeding out the weaklings.

And then came that unforgettable day when Steve, buckled and bundled for the upper zero air, stepped into the cockpit of a Finch trainer and sat with a civilian instructor. He watched his tutor

Blind Wife Takes Stand In Balm Suit

Mrs. Anna E. O'Meara, 36, of Fairfax st, West Somerville, began a recital in Middlesex court today of the manner in which she charges a Watertown woman "alienated and destroyed" the affections of her husband, Joseph O'Meara of Newton.

Blind for seven years, the slender brunette wife is suing Miss Helen Mugar for $50,000, and in his opening before Judge Frank J. Donahue and a jury, Atty. George McLaughlin said it would be shown that Miss Mugar was cashier in a Watertown market where O'Meara worked.

Dressed in black, the plaintiff wife was led to the witness stand, where she testified she met O'Meara in 1922 at a church play. She then was a stenographer in a lawyer's office.

MARRIED IN 1927

On June 2, 1925, she said they became formally engaged and June 5 1927, they were married at St. Benedict's Church, Somerville.

They lived first in School st., Belmont, the witness said, and O'Meara was employed in a Somerville foundry earning an average of about $40 a week.

When his earnings dropped, however, to $15 a week, they went to live with her uncle's family in Somerville, where she now resides.

In 1928 she had trouble with her eyes, but doctors said it was slight, although a small operation was performed.

In 1930 O'Meara obtained a job at Boston Garden as laborer, but in September of 1934 he went to work in a Watertown market.

Between 1927 and 1934, she said her relations with her husband were "very affectionate" and he was seldom out at night.

Her Christmas present in 1933, according to her testimony, was blindness, for on Christmas Day she was forced to undergo an operation for acute glaucoma, or hardening of the eyeballs. Since then she has been blind.

On April 11, 1935, she became a patient at Lakeville Sanitarium, Middleboro, with tuberculosis of the eyes, and before she left for the sanitorium she had a conversation with her husband.

Q—What did he say? A—He said he would always love me. He kissed and hugged me before I left.

Q—Did he say anything about the failure of your sight? A—Yes, he said no matter what took place in my eyes he would always love me.

DISCUSSED GIRL

She said he came to see her at the sanitarium every Sunday, and sometimes on Wednesday afternoons.

Q—Did you notice anything about his actions? A—No, except sometimes he left early, saying he had a meeting at the Star Market.

Q—In July of 1935 did you have any conversation with your husband about Helen Mugar? A—Yes.

Q—What did he say? A—He said she wanted to visit me. I said that I wasn't well enough to have visitors except the immediate family. But he said she wanted to visit me.

Subsequently, said the witness, he received a visit from her hus-

Dartmouth Bids Snowy 'Howdy' To Ski Crowds

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 7—On a campus festooned with frosty figures sculptured from snow, 2400 Dartmouth College students welcomed a crowd of pretty girls to this little town today as the 31st winter carnival got off to a merry start.

With surrounding hills lightly clad in snow, the promise of an outdoor carnival of sport was the brightest in years.

Fresh from strenuous mid-winter examinations, the students bubbled with enthusiasm as they greeted girl friends who had journeyed from the town over yonder and the far spaces of the South and West.

For other guests, Dartmouth had an impressive group of foreigners led by the five-man team of ski experts from Chile. Also an eight-man group of Norwegians, refugees from their homeland.

The lawns of fraternity houses are decorated with frosty pieces of snow sculpture moulded with the aid of ice picks, scrapers and garden hose.

To a giant figure of Heyderdahl, towering 42 feet above the campus, went the greatest admiration. Moulded round a skeleton of iron and wood by a volunteer corps of 30 student sculptors the figure is that of modern Dartmouth named for an ancient Norwegian hero.

Before the Kappa Sigma house is a snow and ice Army tank to which a ski-joring Dartmouth ice student is attached with a rope with the first draft number—158—hanging 'round his neck.

Temperatures are the sole worry of student hosts who view forecasts of a slight rise from the 30 mark with worried eyes lest packed snow trails turn sticky and glazed ice becomes mushy.

"I'M GOING TO LOSE 20 POUNDS"

By MARY X. SULLIVAN

I ought to hang my head today. After all my bragging and good intentions, I gained a half-pound since yesterday!

NOW that she's nearing her goal of 109 pounds, Mary X. Sullivan finds she can again wear the slack-suit she put away "years ago." Here she is at home getting used to the idea.

Boston Evening American Photo

So that now, instead of only 7 pounds I have 7½ to go to get down to 109, which will mean that I've shaken those odious 20 pounds.

It's no mystery. The answer lies in the lobster pattie and other refreshments I didn't resist at a supper dance last night. But after all, I don't mind dieting a little more stringently to make up for it.

If there hadn't been so much exclaiming over my new lines, and if my old evening dress hadn't been so roomy, I might have been more Spartan. Just an attack of delusions of glamour.

SHE STILL EATS!

That brings up the question which so many readers ask me. They want to know if I'll gain all this weight back as soon as I "begin to eat" again, and if I shall have to continue the exercise.

First of all, I haven't stopped eating! Frankly, I expect to have to continue to eschew the high-calorie foods all my life, if I want to stay slim. The prospect doesn't dismay me at all, because I have found that you can eat plenty if you choose wisely. And every now and then I expect to break out and eat something good and fattening.

A man in our office gave me a good tip on that subject. He took

Nope! No pounds off today. Instead, Mary X. went lobster-wild and wooed the scales to the tune of half a pound. So today she progresses backward. But in true Sullivan spirit she sets her mouth in a thin straight line and vows war on overweight. Watch her go from now on! (We hope.)

Malden's White Flag Up, Citizens Win Snow Fight

Everything was all set today for a nice knock-down-and-drag-out battle in Malden court over summonses to householders for allegedly failing to clear sidewalks of snow—just as the legal gloves were being tied on, the city of Malden surrendered.

More than 50 householders, some prominent, some old, some young, and many with expensive counsel to battle for principle in the matter of a mere city ordinance violation, were assembled in court when Judge Elbridge G. Davis entered.

From the bench he announced City Solicitor Bernard Kaplan had nol prossed all charges. There was a stir, then a shuffling of feet and the erstwhile indignant citizens departed—with a moral victory.

Last Tuesday the aldermen voted unanimously to request such nol prosse from the city socilitor, and the mayor concurred. Although the city council has yet to ratify action, the solicitor acted.

Meanwhile, the city government has moved toward the purchase of sidewalk snowplows.

Retail Men Assail Auto-Tagging Drive

Denunciations by retail merchants and legal complications today threatened to snag the Boston police parking drive now in its fourth day.

Daniel A. Bloomfield, chairman of the Boston Retail Trade Board, disclosed that he had lodged a protest against the drive with Police Commr. Timilty.

Other retail leaders indicated they would make similar protests to other city officials.

"I telephoned the commissioner," Bloomfield said, "and told him tagging was interfering with the delivery and collection of merchandise by stores and it was obvious that if something was not done the whole trade of the city would wither."

LEGAL SNAG SEEN

Legal complications snagging the drive in the downtown area were seen when it was learned the law provides police serve summons on operators in person or through the mail.

Police procedure during the drive has been to attach a blue slip to parked cars if operators were not present. This tag directed them to report at the Milk st. station. There a clerk served the pink slip summons.

Thus motorists actually made an illegal procedure legal, in the opinion of some traffic law experts, by appearing in person for a summons. It is believed if they had disregarded the blue slip any summons mailed after 10 days would have been without legal force.

Just what the outcome would be municipal court attaches were loath to say, but it is known that Chief Justice F. Delano Putnam conferred with court officers handling parking summonses.

COUNCILOR GETS TAG

Harvey B. Hudson, first assistant clerk and an authority on issuing complaints, and Robert McDonough, court clerk, held a conference with Judge Putnam.

While the subject of the conference was not divulged, it was noted that it is to Hudson that motorists served with a pink tag must report in municipal court while McDonough is the issuing clerk at the Milk st. station.

As confusion and protests muddled the situation, City Councilor Maurice H. Sullivan revealed he had been tagged—no blue slip, but a pink one through the mail—and asked reporters to listen while he called Commr. Timilty on the phone.

Unable to speak with the commissioner in person, Sullivan had to content himself with swapping verbal thrusts with Andrew J. Gorey, Timilty's secretary.

CHARGES POLITICS

The irate councilor informed Gorey his car was tagged Tuesday in Court st. while he was escorting a blind, 7-year-old girl into City Hall Annex to arrange for lessons in Braille.

As reporters crowded around extension lines in the council chamber, Sullivan said:

"Who is playing politics? Is it Billso Hickey or Joe Timilty? I couldn't walk that child from Park sq. to City Hall. I never received a summons in my life until now and I don't like it.

"This is a squabble between Joe and Billso. It is a matter of feathering their own nests, they are playing politics. I read where Billso got his tag all right. Has Timilty got one yet?"

At this point Gorey replied:

"The commissioner didn't get one, but I did."

To give the conversation a neat windup, Sullivan retorted:

"The only car parked in School st. at noon today was a police cruiser, parked directly in front of City Hall."

DRIVE TO CONTINUE

In the meantime, it was reported that Council Colleagues William F. Hurley, Roxbury, and Philip A. Fish, Dorchester, angered by the Sullivan affair, were out looking for parking space violations of permits granted by the street commission.

As for the police, well, headquarters reporters pictured them in a jolly frame of mind anent the whole business. All they asked was more officers to do a better job.

And police officials said, privately of course, that they had to confess the end was not in sight—not for perhaps 30 days. But they did admit toes were being tromped on, big toes too, and the complaints were plaintive but unavailing.

Co-operative to the last, it was admitted by traffic officials, that hotel, theater and night club areas were next on the list.

CAR OWNERS IRATE

In the meantime, confused autoists were asking what was the purpose of the drive and who was behind it. Some retail executives frankly stated it must be stopped or it would be impossible to do business and the whole city would soon be turned into a graveyard.

From one reliable source came word that heavy pressure had been brought to bear on merchants to accept the parking meter scheme so often suggested in the past and the current drive against parking looked like a move to force their acceptance.

So indiscriminate has been the handing out of tags that important retail stores in the heart of the downtown shopping area reported their delivery trucks, stopped for short periods to pick up merchandise, had been tagged.

SANTA M. COSTA
$8400 Swindle Victim

THOMAS LYONS
Admits $8400 Swindle

GUILTY OF $8431 THEFT FROM GIRL

Standing with lowered head in the prisoner's dock in Boston Municipal Court, his eyes never once meeting those of the girl who police said had mortgaged her entire financial future for his sake, Thomas G. Lyons, 36, of G st., South Boston, pleaded guilty today to a charge of larceny of $8431.48 from Miss Santa M. Costa, Boston librarian.

Lyons had been arrested after obtaining the money from Miss Costa while posing as a medical student and interne, protegee of eminent Boston physicians, and prospective heir to a vast estate in process of settlement in St. Augustine, Fla.

The arresting officers, Lieut. James V. Crowley and Special Officer William Philbrick of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, both testified they had learned Lyons had never attended a medical school nor served internship in any hospital.

After hearing the officer's testimony, Judge Joseph Riley held Lyons in $10,000 bail for disposition of his case Feb. 13.

"The National Defense program could use a man who can raise money this easily," Judge Riley remarked.

TOLD OF MEDICAL WORK

The officers testified Lyons first met Miss Costa on Nov. 8, 1938, at the International Institute in Beacon st., and that he told her he was a student at Harvard Medical School and an interne at the Peter Bent Brigham and Massachusetts General Hospitals. He also told her, the officers said, that he would be wealthy when his Florida estate was settled, but that he was temporarily in need of funds, lack of which threatened his medical education and his career.

Shortly after their first meeting, the officers testified, Miss Costa gave Lyons $200 and later at various times gave him sums totaling $8,431.48. These sums were paid over, they said, when Miss Costa met him either outside various Boston hospitals or outside the Harvard Medical School, where he represented himself to be working and studying.

He told her, police said, of operations he had performed, and occasionally went to other cities, sending her messages of his medical successes. One message, they said, came from Johns Hopkins Hospital, in Baltimore, and read: "Operation successful."

YOUTH NABBED AFTER SLUGGING TEACHER

The possibility that a series of recent sluggings and attempted attacks which have terrorized women in West Roxbury, Brookline and Brighton may be solved soon was hinted by police today as they questioned a 17-year-old Brighton youth.

A student in Brighton High School until only three weeks ago, the youth was seized during a chase which followed an assault on Miss Margaret M. Fitzgerald, 27, Boston school teacher, at the entrance of her home in Presentation rd., Brighton.

A man sprang at her from the shadows as she was walking up the steps and struck her about the head. He then knocked the young woman down and tried to stifle her cries for help by stuffing handfuls of snow into her mouth.

Edward Taaffe, a neighbor, saw the struggle and ran from his house to aid Miss Fitzgerald. Her assailant, an agile youth with a good acquaintance of back yards and other means of escape, fled in the direction of Hunnewell st.

Meanwhile, dozens of telephones from other neighbors informed officers at the Brighton police station of the battle and Lieut. Edward Cain ordered three cruiser cars to converge on the area.

Cornered in Perthshire rd., Brighton, a dead-end street, the youth was caught by Taaffee and a group of officers when he atempted to leap another fence.

SHIP WORKER KILLED

Ernest Condry, 21, of Preston ct., Dorchester, was crushed to death today at the Lawley Shipyards, Neponset, when a heavy section of armor plate fell on him.

Girl Tells G-Men of Elopement

The "whole story" of her trip to Mississippi with Everett City Councilor Alfred Farese has been told to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation by Edith M. Anderson, 17-year-old East Boston schoolgirl-model, it was revealed today.

In an interview with a Boston Evening American reporter, Mrs. Edith E. Anderson of Havre st., East Boston, mother of the girl, said:

"Edith is now at a Lawrence home in a state of collapse and under a doctor's care. But before she went, in fact that the very day she came back to Boston, she told thew hole story of her trip to G-men.

"She told them that when she went with Farese—to be married, as she thought—she had no idea he was married. He kept all the papers away from her on the trip south.

"When she came back the reason she would not talk to police was not that she was defiant, but that she was frightened and her health shattered by all that had happened.

"She was a victim of circumstances. She was a good girl and never did anything wrong. I've heard that Farese told his wife he took Edith to get her a job. That's ridiculous. He never talked about work when he came to this house, all he spoke of was marriage."

Mrs. Anderson said she had hired Atty. Mario DeTroia of East Boston to defend her daughter. The girls is now in charge of the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

COP'S OWN STORY OF BEACH TRAGEDY

SALEM, Feb. 7—"To tell the God's truth, no!" John W. Henry, former Salisbury special policeman, shouted from the witness stand in Essex Superior Court today, when he was asked: "Do you know how far from the ocean you left her?"

His vehement reply followed interrogation on his actions on the deserted beach last Oct. 25 with Mrs. Olive Farrell, Salisbury Beach hotel hostess, on account of whose death Henry is fighting second degree murder charges.

"It was pitch dark. I had no thoughts of tide or ocean, or anything of the kind."

TELLS OF FATAL NIGHT

This testimony followed Henry's recital of events on the night before Mrs. Farrell's body was found in the surf and the question from Michael J. Batal, Henry's counsel:

"Was Olvie Farrell conscious when you left her?"

"She was positively conscious," cried Henry. "As I told you she had just said 'Go away and leave me alone.' She was sitting up."

Henry, taking the stand in his own defense, testified he had lived in Salisbury for 12 years, was married and had two children. He said he had been a special policeman for nine or 10 years and gave his occupation as "driving a truck for an oil company."

He said he was a World War veteran, 27 months in the Army, 21 months in France.

HAD TWO OR THREE DRINKS

Henry added that as a special officer he worked at Lucian's restaurant in the summers of 1938 and 1939.

The witness told Judge Vincent Brogna and the jury that on the afternoon of Oct. 24 he went to a fire, as a volunteer fireman, and that after the fire "some liquor showed up." He said he took "a couple of drinks—as much as anybody else—I'd say two or three drinks."

He then went to Lucian's, he related, and there heard the proprietor, who was trying to obtain some social security information from Mrs. Farrell ,tell her.

"You aren't any use to me at all. You're always stiff. Go to bed."

Henry said Mrs. Farrell left and went to Shaffee's barbecue restaurant. He followed her out, returned and asked Lucian to help him get Mrs. Farrell and Lucian answered:

"I'm all done," and refused.

"I went back. Olive was sitting in a booth. I said, 'What do you say. How about going home?' She said, 'I'm not going back there.'"

SLAPPED HER ONCE

They argued, Henry said, and she kept replying:

"Nothing doing. I'm going to stay here."

"I said, 'You're going home if I have to take you myself.' I put my arm around her, and as she came out of the booth she fell. She was sitting on the floor. I prodded her with my foot and said, 'Come on, Olive.'"

Henry said he led her out and on the way slapped her face once.

They walked across the square, along Central ave. and then sat down on the sand. Henry said he argued and pleaded with the woman to go home and told her:

"You're a sucker to get drunk all the time."

Later, Henry testified, Mrs. Farrell took off her underclothing, started to wriggle out of her corset but could not get it up or down and asked him to help pull it off.

HER SHOES CAME OF

Mrs. Farrell, Henry said, continued to refuse to go home, but later got up, then sat down again and told him the only way he could get her to go was to drag her home.

Henry said he then took her by the heels and "started to haul her" and her shoes came off in his hands.

CANADA ACES MISSING

OFFICE WORKERS' PAY SET

The Massachusetts Minimum Wage Commission today accepted a special state board's recommendations establishing minimum wages for 150,000 office workers in the Commonwealth.

The board urged $16 a week for experienced workers; $15 a week for inexperienced workers; $13.50 for experienced office boys and girl messengers; $12 for inexperienced employes in that classification.

The board's recommendations lack a provision for a maximum hour week. As the law stands, employers engaged in interstate business can avail themselves of the 48-hour law.

Organized labor has sought inclusion of a 40-hour maximum but this provision, made in recommendations of a previous board—which also held for a $16.50 minimum for experienced workers—was not accepted following a public hearing.

Gen. Charles H. Cole, chairman of the commission, said a public hearing will be held before an order becomes effective. He added that the commission has the power to send the recommendations back to the special board for reconsideration, or can order the formation of another board.

Experienced part-time workers, under the recommendations, rate 47 cents an hour; inexperienced, 44 cents; experienced office boys, 39 cents and inexperienced, 35 cents.

"Experienced" is defined as 12 months' full-time office employment or its equivalent.

Man Shot to Death While Attending Baby

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (AP)—The body of a man shot to death while minding the four-month-old daughter of a couple in the Bronx, was identified today by police as that of Benjamin Tannenbaum, 35, alias "Ben the Boss."

The man was shot in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Max Heitner, but the shots didn't awaken baby Paulette. Tannenbaum was known as a "loan shark."

The Heitners said Tannenbaum had lived with them from time to time and had done accounting work for Heitner.

When Stork Brings Quads Dad Says This

FARGO, N. D., Feb. 7 (AP)—Nick Brown, with a smile as big as his big face, one fist full of cigars and the other full of handshakes, had heard the question 20 times if he'd heard it once yesterday:

"Nick, what did you say when they told you you had four new kids?"

Nick's smile grew bigger.

"Boy, I didn't say a dang thing! I just looked!"

Through a glass window as two nurses scurried about, he looked at a girl and three boys to whom his 37-year-old reddish-haired wife gave birth between 1:10 and 1:15 p. m., yesterday, in St. John's Hospital.

That doubled the Brown family. They have four other boys, ages 18 months, 3, 10 and 12 years.

"Seven boys to get a girl," laughed Nick.

HOUSE NEEDS ADDITION

Nick, who's about 40, own a farm and filling station. He thought of their four-room house on the wheatlands near Leonard, 30 miles southwest of here and mused:

"Nick, I guess you're gonna have to build an addition."

In the hospital, tired but happy and in good health was the tall, slender mother. She smiled faintly and murmured she was glad it was over and that "they're all right." They came a month prematurely.

Immediately placed in separate incubators and attended constantly by shifts of two nurses who fed them by bottle, the babies cried lustily.

"Listen to them—they're healthy enough," said one nurse.

X-RAY WARNED HER

Since Dec. 3, when Mrs. Brown entered the hospital, she and Dr. J. F. Hanna had known through X-rays the possibility she would bear quadruplets—a once in the million birth.

Dr. Hanna was surprised at the weights. The girl, first born, was 4 pounds 10 ounces, and the boys, in order of birth, were 4 pounds 10 ounces, 4 pounds 9 ounces and 3 pounds 12 ounces. Twins frequently weigh less.

Hospital switchboard rang all night with scores of inquiries, some from as far away as St. Louis and Chicago.

Coal Firm to Pay Settling Damage

WEST PITTSTON, Pa., Feb. 7 (AP)—Residents of this community in the heart of eastern Pennsylvania's hard coal region were cheered today by reports that there was little further danger of new mine sinkings and that repairs to homes damaged by yesterday's tightening settling would be paid for by the coal company whose workings caused the subsidence.

BUCKLEY EXPERTS DISAGREE

A battle of handwriting experts held the stage today at the hearing on a petition to oust State Auditor Thomas J. Buckley for alleged violation of the corrupt practice act.

Miss Elizabeth McCarthy reaffirmed for the three Superior Court justices sitting in the case that the Buckley signature on the alleged contract promising Philip A. Banks, Hanover st, photo-engraver, $3000 or a job was definitely a forgery, done with free hand and not traced.

It appeared that the hand that wrote the signature was following a genuine signature, she declared.

William Turner, expert called by the petitioners, took the opposite stand.

"I fail to find anything wrong in the signature and believe the signature in the contract is the genuine signature of Thomas Buckley," he said.

Under cross-examination by Hubert Thompson, counsel for Buckley, Turner admitted "some dissimilarities" in the signature on the alleged contract and those on other documents admitted as exhibits.

He attributed these dissimilarities to a "faulty pen—a slow flowing pen."

Pancoast Widow Dies at 80

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (INS)—Mrs. Emma Fiedler Pancoast, widow of George E. Pancoast, who was chief engineer and mechanical director of the Hearst newspapers, died yesterday in Long Island College Hospital of a heart attack. She was 80 years old.

Her husband died of pneumonia two years ago in the same hospital. He was 77.

On Feb. 10, 1938, Mrs. Pancoast was present when 650 guests gathered at a dinner to mark her husband's 50th year in the Hearst service. William Randolph Hearst, Jr., was chairman of the dinner committee.

Pancoast designed and built 17 Hearst plants and invented so many newspaper processes that he was frequently called "miracle man of the press."

He was working as a printer on the San Francisco Examiner when William Randolph Hearst chose him to be his secretary.

MAX ANNENBERG DIES FROM AUTO INJURIES

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 7 (AP)—Max Annenberg, 59, former circulation directo of the New York Daily News, died here about 1 a. m.

Annenberg was recuperating from injuries suffered in an automobile accident last fall. His wife, Ethel, was at his bedside when he died.

Annenberg, born in Prussia, was one of a family of nine children. At 3, Max Annenberg sold newspapers in Chicago. CASH GIFTS POUR IN FOR DEFENSE

One War Vet Sends His $1570 Bonus, Others Pennies, Stamps

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—An unsolicited stream of cash and checks—sometimes even pennies and postage stamps—is trickling into the Treasury every day from Americans eager to help their country prepare for defense.

An Indian chief sent in a dollar. A Massachusetts girl gave 12 cents she earned picking berries.

A Korean ineligible for United States citizenship, said he thought America "a wonderful country" anyway, and contributed $100.

Treasury officials said a surprisingly large part of the $5720 received so far came from poor or disabled persons.

The offerings have been addressed to President Roosevelt, to the Treasury, defense commission and many other agencies. Some of the givers have promised regular remittances of as much as 4 per cent of their income, and are living up to their word.

VET GIVES $1570 BONUS

A World War veteran, who acted through a friend and kept his own identity secret, mailed $1570 with a note saying.

"The enclosed represents my soldier's bonus. It is returned because you need every man and every dollar."

The Treasury sought unsuccessfully to identify him, because letters of appreciation are being mailed all donors.

While the Treasury can accept donations for a general purpose such as defense, it cannot without a special act of Congress take money hinged with specific restrictions. Each giver has been asked whether he was willing to have his money put in the general fund.

ONE STOPS CHECK

One person who had sent $100 replied by stopping payment on his check.

In another case, $10 was returned voluntarily by the Treasury because the woman wanted promises the United States would not get involved in the European war.

An elderly Coloradoan arranged personal as well as financial assistance.

"I received my old age pension yesterday," he wrote in a note enclosing a dollar. "I have enough money saved up to buy a good gun and plenty of ammunition when the shooting starts."

Many of the givers regretted their inability to join the Army or Navy. A Tennessee invalid contributed $10, saying:

"Never did I feel my disability so keenly as I do now when the nation is facing a real peril."

One man who gave $2 apologized for not sending more, but explained he had a wife, 10 children and a "very small salary."

The gifts began arriving shortly after the President's first big defeure appropriation plea, and have been increasing since.

COLLIE, ON HUNGER STRIKE, TO JOIN MASTER

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 7 (AP)—Laddie, a 10-year-old airedale, was so lonely after Everett Scott left to become a private in Uncle Sam's Army that he just wasted away. Actually did, the dog doc said.

Laddie went on a hunger strike and dropped from a healthy 35 or 40 pounds to an emaciated 25. Mrs. Jerry Kustanborter, who was keeping Laddie at Chanute, Kan., became so worried she wrote Scott to see if something couldn't be done.

Maj.-Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell, commandant at Camp Ord, Cal., said sure, send Laddie out there to rejoin his master, Transcontinental & Western Air heard about Laddie and offered him a free ride.

Laddie came to Kansas City by train last night and was to go right on to California by plane. But Dr. V. Y. Druley, a veterinarian said Laddie was too weak.

He offered Laddie the dog's delight: A platter of hamburger.

Laddie refused to eat. So Dr. Druley fed him a solution of beef, milk and eggs through a stomach tub and bundled him off to a hospital.

If Laddie's a good dog and eats well, he can go flying to Master Scott in a day or two.

4½ Billions Is Goal Of Baby-Bond Drive

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (INS)—The government's forthcoming "buy-a-bond" drive is expected to raise approximately $4,500,000,000 over the next 17 months, federal fiscal experts estimated today.

The drive, to be patterned after World War money-raisng campaign of 1917-18, will feature defense savings stamps and bonds. A special series of the stamps in denominations of 10, 25 and 50 cents, and one dollar will be sold through existing postoffice facilities, according to tentative plans. These will be exchangeable for defense savings bonds, similar to "baby" bonds.

This mehod of "retailing" government securites is expected to help relieve the strain on the financial world during the next year and a half, when about $13,000,000,000 must be raised to meet the cost of national defense. Treasury experts contend it will also help avoid an inflationary rise in prices by "recapturing" money which otherwise would be spent for so-called consumer goods.

School children, workers and business men will be asked to "contribute," but Secreary of the Treasury Morgenthau has stressed that the campaign will be conducted along economic, educational lines, and that coercion and intimidation will not be used.

Civilian Jobs For Draft Objectors

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (INS)—President Roosevelt today moved to put conscientious objectors against military training to work at civilian jobs.

Draft Director Clarence A. Dykstra was authorized in an executive order "to establish, designate, or determine work of national importance under civilian direction" for those young men who claim to be conscientiously opposed to either combatant or non-combatant military training.

Fred Perkins Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Frederic P. Perkins, Boston Evening American news and feature writer, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Waterman's Funeral Chapel, Kenmore square.

Following these services, which will be attended by newspaper friends, the body will be taken to Manchester, N. H., where he was born 43 years ago.

Burial will be in Manchester, the body being met at the train by World War veterans and escorted to the cemetery for services at the grave.

Junior Oscars To Boy, Girl

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7 (AP)—Two thousand children at a dance studio have jumped the gun on the Motion Picture Academy, which is to hold its annual awards dinner late this month.

The youngsters, ranging in age from 3 to 14 years, chose Billy Lee as the best boy actor of 1940 for his work in "The Biscuit Eater," and named Gloria Jean, of "A Little Bit of Heaven," for feminine honors.

Meglin studio officials said junior Oscars, awarded annually, would be presented to the two children at a luncheon tomorrow.

The boys chose "Rebecca" as the best picture of the year. The girls preferred "Gone With the Wind."

UTILITY BOARD FIRES AIDE, WON'T TELL WHY

Considerable mystery today surrounded action of the State Public Utilities Commission in terminating the services of Joseph Riceman of Hutchins st., Roxbury, as administrative secretary.

Riceman's six months' probationary period would have ended Feb. 19, after which time he would automatically have become a permanent employe of the department. His salary as administrative secretary is $3750, and later he would have been eligible for an increase to $4500.

The only members of the commission available today declined to discuss their action and refused to state their reason for discharge of Riceman.

WON'T DISCUSS

John J. Cutley, a member of the commission said:

"It was agreed that we would not discuss the case. I would like to see Riceman stay."

Gilbert W. Cox, another member of the commission said:

"It is a commission action and will have to speak for itself."

"Why all the mystery?" asked a reporter. "Can't you give me the reason why Riceman was dismissed?"

"I don't intend to enter into any debate," was his reply.

Carroll L. Meins, chairman of the commission and former chief secretary of Governor Saltonstall, went to Florida yesterday.

Riceman, a wounded World War veteran, took a competitive examination for the position as administrative secretary. His appointment last August was compulsory as he headed the list.

TWO OTHERS ON LIST

Only two others remain on the list, James M. Cushing, Sewall Chestnut Hill, a veteran, and Leon and F. Hardy of Burlington, former member of the Public Utilities commission and at present confidential secretary to the commission at $2400 a year.

Miss Lillian MacDonald of Pinckney st., Beacon Hill, who was secretary to Chairman Meins when he was Governor Saltonstall's secretary, is slated for appointment as confidential secretary to the commission, it is reported.

Director Lappen said that no reason was given by the commission for the ousting of Riceman and that none is necessary under civil service rules.

Hassett Offers Income Tax Aid

In order to speed the filing of an additional 6,000,000 income tax returns, anticipated as a result of changes in the revenue law, the Treasury Department today announced that deputies are ready to help taxpayers make out forms.

Thomas B. Hassett, Boston collector of Internal Revenue, emphasized that the service is free and urged potential taxpayers to take full advantage of it immediately. He pointed out that the deadline is March 15 and those who wait will be caught in the last-minute rush.

Last year 9,000,000 income tax returns were filed, but this year because tax bases have been lowered and tax returns reckoned on gross instead of net income the number of taxpayers is expected to approximate 15,000,000.

This year single persons whose gross income is $800 and married persons whose combined gross income is $2000 must file a return. Last year the base was $1000 for single persons and $2500 for married persons. The credit of $100 for each dependent has not been changed.

In issuing a plea to the public to co-operate by filing early, Hassett pointed out that this year the income tax and the new defense tax will be collected at the same time. The two may be paid in one lump sum or in four quarterly instalments.

U. S. SLOW IN AIR, SAYS ACE

was "seriously deficient" in engines. He did not mean to imply, he added, manufacturers of existing engines were to blame. He said the fault lay more in the fact that dependence had been placed too largely in three types of streamlined, liquid-cooled engines.

He said the Allison engine, used largely in American combat ships, had a horsepower rating of 1075 compared with the "1200 or 1300" horsepower of the English Rolls-Royce, which since has been stepped up in a new type to 1500 to 1700 horsepower.

The British have developed, Williams said, a new "X" type engine which rates at 2000 horsepower, adding

"We have no such in-line engines capable of developing 1000 horsepower."

U. S. PLANES SLOW?

He said that while the Allison engine was rated at 1075 horsepower it was "turning out" only 950 and that was "seldom used."

Sen. La Follette (P.) of Wisconsin asked Williams what he knew about the present state of development and design of American aircraft.

"There is not a standard, single-seater fighting plane in this country which can hold a candle to the supermarine Spitfire of the British or to the German Messerschmidt 109," the witness replied.

Under questioning by LaFollette, Williams expressed the belief a mistake was being made in turning over so-called "obsolescent" or "obsolete" ships to other nations. These ships were needed badly, he contended, for the secondary training of pilots who otherwise might have to go direct from relatively slow trainers to first-line combat ships.

WHY FRANCE FELL

That was one of the reasons for the failure of the French air force to stop the Germans, he said, adding that France had a "super abundance" of obsolescent planes for such training purposes, but "busily engaged in shipping them abroad to their interests in Spain" before the present war broke out.

Williams testified he thought Germany now was turning out from 3000 to 5000 planes a month. He said also that while he was on air inspection trips of Europe in 1938, he learned the Germans were turning out 600 war planes a month, using only one eight hour shift of workmen and only one-fourth of the machinery available in plane factories.

Williams said he advised Lord Beaverbrook, now in charge of British aircraft production, of what he had learned. Beaverbrook replied, Williams said, the bomber was "a muchly overadvertised myth" which the British would "blow out of the air" with their anti-aircraft guns.

WARNED BEAVERBROOK

In reply, Williams said he told Beaverbrook:

"If you combat the German air force as it exists today with what you have, you may get the licking of your lives and it may cost you your empire."

In reply to a question from Sen. Nye (R.) of North Dakota, Williams said that, like Col. Charles A. Lindbergh testified yesterday, he did not believe Great Britain could win the war.

Citing a statement by Williams that "perfunctory approval" for terming the aircraft "obsolete" was obtained from the air corps men before the plane transfers were made, Majority Leader Barkley (D.) of Kentucky asked:

"Do you mean to imply that these men in the air service are so cowardly in the face of a superior officer that they wouldn't tell the truth about the condition of an airplane?"

"No," Williams replied. "I know the caliber of these men. I mean to imply nothing. The correct and the adroit examination of a witness can bring out certain impressions as to justify certain conclusions."

WON'T MAKE CHARGES

"Do you mean," Barkley asked, "that the President of the United States might ask the chief of the air corps whether a plane was obsolete and that the chief of the air corps would say yes, having in mind that the President wanted an excuse?"

"I won't say that's what I mean, no, sir," Williams replied, "but that's what might easily be done."

"Do you know of any officer in the Air Corps, Army or Navy, who has been afraid to protest to any one above him about the disposition of any airplane?" Barkley then asked.

"No sir," was the reply, "I think that would be known elsewhere."

Barkley cited Williams' prepared statement that Army and Navy officials had been unable to protest plane transfers.

NO ARMY, NAVY PROTEST

"Despite the fact that usable equipment and vitally important equipment was going out of the country," Williams said in explanation, "I don't know of any protest reaching sizeable proportions. They didn't reach the public. My familiarity with the service makes me believe that they were made but didn't go any further."

Williams was unsparing in his criticism both of the Administration's British aid policy to date and of the powers proposed in the bill.

He ridiculed talk of invasion dangers as "nonsense," "horror stories," and "persistent promotion of hysteria by both the Administration and several powerful groups in this country."

Speaking specifically of the Pacific, he said

"Only imperialists amongst us dream of exerting American naval or military dominance in the Far East. We should quash these wild dreams—withdraw our armed forces from the Far East—silence those admirals who chant 'the inevitability of war' and recognize that there are zones of military and naval influences beyond our control."

His attitude on British aid he defined thus:

"When and when only, the United States is possessed of adequate air power to protect the United States and all that it stands for, am I in favor of giving one wing or one propeller to any other nation."

Kick Out Axis Envoys, Plea Of Prof. Leach

The government should "kick out" German and Italian ambassadors and all the consular officials of those governments now in this country, Prof. W. Barton Leach, Jr., of the Harvard Law School faculty, told members of the Temple Sinai Brotherhood last night in a forthright aid-to-England speech at Smith House, Cambridge.

No trade exists between the U. S. and the two Axis powers because of the war, he said, and it is obvious that commercial agents of all parties have nothing to do.

Prof. Leach spoke scornfully of recent increases in the German consular staffs in this country—some reported as high as 400 per cent—and declared this government arm had the sole purpose of building up sabotage in defense plants.

He urged speedy aid to England as "our one course of safety to prevent a German victory in 1941"—even to the extent of furnishing convoys or war material shipped to Britain.

He declared this would not be a violation of international law and said that if we were convinced we ought to send such aid to Britain we ought to be equally concerned that it arrives.

The United States is "absolutely safe" if England wins, he said, but added "if Germany wins, the United States is on the spot."

band and Helen Mugar which lasted from 3 to 6:45 p. m.

The witness said that in September of 1936 she had received a card and then an air mail letter from O'Meara, who said he was on a business trip to New York. But in February, 1937, she declared, she learned that he had also gone to Washington.

She said she talked with him regarding the September trip and, as a result—of that conversation, she had her sister go to the Watts Detective Agency.

As a result of her retaining the detectives, she said, she was able to confront O'Meara with a report that he had gone to Washington with Miss Mugar and that they had stayed together at a New York hotel.

Q—Did he say anything? A—No.

Q—Did you ever ask your husband to give her up? A—Yes, I begged him to give Miss Mugar up. He said he would.

Q—What did he do? A—He got down on his knees and promised he would never see Miss Mugar again.

Q—Was there any change in his attitude after this? A—Yes, he was the same old Joe O'Meara I used to know. He was wonderful.

Tinkham Loses Fight for Red Ban in House

joined in that viewpoint, contending its adoption might "drive Russia further and closer into the arms of Hitler."

Before the Tinkham amendment was considered, the House accepted by voice vote a foreign affairs committee amendment designed to clarify the effect of the bill on the use of American vessels for convoy purposes.

Nothing in the measure, it said, should be construed as permitting entry of American ships into combat areas in violation of the 1939 neutrality law.

The first prohibition against convoys was written into the bill late yesterday.

Then the House rejected on a 91 to 57 standing vote an amendment by Rep. Mott (R.) of Oregon, intended further to clarify the second convoy clause, sponsored by Chairman Bloom. Mott said Bloom's amendment would not be effective.

BAN ON CONCESSIONS

Mott said his proposal would prevent sending any United States ships to belligerent nations or through a combat area. Such prohibitions in the neutrality law relate only to individuals and to privately-owned ships.

A policy of "no more concessions" on the bill was agreed on by House Democratic leadership shortly before the fight over the amendments was resumed.

After a conference with Democratic members of the foreign affairs committee, Speaker Rayburn told newsmen the group had decided to "fight" a series of Republican proposals to limit the scope of the legislation and further curb the powers it would confer on the President to lend or lease supplies and equipment to nations resisting aggression.

All signs pointed to a rollcall on the bill late today with Administration leaders forecasting victory by a safe margin.

Rayburn said specifically it had been decided to oppose an amendment advanced by Rep. Eaton (R.) of New Jersey to limit the aid to Britain to $2,000,000,000 in credits.

LET CURB STAND

Both Rayburn and Chairman Bloom (D.) of New York indicated they had decided against making any effort to remove from the bill an amendment by Rep. Dirksen (R.) of Illinois which, adopted yesterday by a narrow margin, would give Congress the power to terminate the lend-lease provision at any time.

"It's in the bill now," said Rayburn, adding that its elimination might sacrifice new support the leadership had gained for the measure.

To meet demands for a tightening up on contracts, sponsors of the bill yesterday pushed through an amendment which provided that all materials ordered during the two-year life of the bill could be delivered within five years.

Also, they agreed to a clause stating that the bill would not authorize American ships to enter combat zones in violation of the present neutrality law.

Today, Chairman Bloom introduced an amendment to extend this combat zone point.

The House yesterday approved another section which said that nothing in the measure could be construed to authorize or permit the convoying of vessels by the United States Navy.

A vigorous appeal for passage of the bill was made in today's debate by Rep. Courtney (D.) of Tennessee, who said it was essential to permit the United States to prepare its defenses which he said "must be made against Germany, Italy and Japan, if they win."

Greeks Advance In Big Storm

ATHENS, Feb. 7 (AP)—Greek occupation of positions north of the Trebessina mountain range has been completed, dispatches from the central Albanian front reported today.

Heavy fighting marked the Greek advance.

In the face of blinding rain and lightning, a British RAF communique said, British bombers carried out an air attack yesterday on Italian positions in the area west of Tepeleni. Military stores, wood cars huts and motor transport concentrations" were hit, it said.

U. S. YOUTH BECOMES CANADIAN WARBIRD

adjust the gas mixture, test the motor with gusty bursts and signal his mechanic to take the wheel-chocks away. The little Finch accelerated over the hubbly ground and lifted into the air like a dainty lady shrugging her shoulders.

BALANCES STICK

Steve, balancing the stick between his finger-tips, felt its sidewise shuttle as the instructor justified the plane's pitches and swerves in the moderately rough air.

And finally he heard the command, "All right. Take over!"

It was amazingly simple, exactly as though he was still sitting in a Link ground trainer at the Hunt Club and nosing gently up and down or banking in gradual sweeps, a few feet from the floor. But this was flying!

In this initial lesson, said Steve, there had been gradual circling banks and downward swoops to acquire the feel of the meeting point between the "arc of flight" and the "plane of earth"—the heart-thumping instants when the frozen ground rushed up and there was the dread thought of under-shooting the field and nosing over in a ground "loop."

There were long hours, too, of cross-country work while the instructor showed Steve how to orient his map and how to follow the radio-beam with its steady "Beeep-beeep" when you are on its true line and its warning, "Beeep-b'p" or "B'p-Beeep" when you are too far to port or starboard.

He learned to fly by "dead reckoning" of compass and allowances for wind driftage. He learned to recognize the landmarks spotted on his map. And gradually, he said, the plane began to feel one with himself as though some spiritual piece of surgery had been performed to graft man and machine together. There was nothing conscious about flying now.

SOLO TEST!

Then came the crisp, blue and gold January morning when Steve's instructor said with a negligent wave of the hand, "This is your Solo test!" Solo! ... Solo! the word struck Steve like the flick of a wet towel.

Vaguely his ears heard his tongue say, "Yes, Sir!" Numbly his legs straddled the stick and he was alone under his glass blister. As he "gunned" his motors he felt covertly for the handle of his parachute rip. And presently he was coasting over the ground, felt his tail straighten, was up and up in gentle gusts and seeing the ground recede into a miniature scene.

"At that moment," said Steve, "I was conscious of an unlimited power—on a level with the gods. And I knew I would never have air tremors again. At that instant the embryo became the actual fledgling—I was a pilot!"

There were seven weeks of training at London, interspersed with 50 hours in the air, some in dirty, foggy weather where the ceiling was low and the strata of clouds thick and curdled.

There was misty weather where the visibility was veiled at 100 yards and you were in constant danger of collisions. And days when the landing field was a soupy quagmire with treacherous, hub-deep puddles, and slippery, glistening glazes where your ship slewed sidewise.

But England was pleading "Hurry! Hurry!" and the earlier, safer training leisure was replaced by pressure, sink-or-swim!

INSTRUMENT FLYING

Steve and his fellows learned a gradual series of lazy acrobats, the barrell roll, the vertical dive, the tail stand, the Immelmann turn and inside loop. And finally there were five hours of blind, instrument flying where, sight unseen, he had to complete a series of triangles and hit them exactly on their apexes.

The trouble now, said Steve, was that you grew overly familiar with the air. You had a feeling of bird-like competence and began to take chances. There was not enough impression of speed in the upper heights—just a droopy, droning mooch. So you would scud close to the ground and hedge-hop over farm fields just to watch the scenery whizz by in a mad, skin-prickling blur.

The farmers sometimes telephoned complaints to the C. O. because you scared their cows from giving milk and sometimes one of the more reckless lads hit a telephone wire and ended an incinerated clinker. It was, by all odds, the greatest danger stage in training.

There were a few fatal accidents and some of Steve's class "washed out" in various studies. But the bulk graduated from ranks of Leading Aircraftsmen to Sergeants and a boost in pay to $2.20 a day, plus 75 cents flying pay.

And then, in mid-January, Steve and the remnant of his class passed on to the Service Flying School at Camp Bordon, Ont.

Here, in the heart of this rural, far-from-town, settlement, there was more practice than theory, with 100 hours of flying in formation, night navigation, cross-country hop over strange terrains, aerobatic and dog fighting.

LARGE PLANES

The primary, tiny Finches and Moths were replaced now by the larger, more air active North American Harvards—not fighting machines, but closer to the cut. Not, perhaps, until he reached England and his last fifty hours of flight training would he pilot a Spitfire or Hurricane.

And now, lastly, there was a course in machine gunnery and aiming with photographic instruments fixed on gun struts and sprung on a trigger. It was fascinating to maneuver on an "enemy," catch him fleetingly between your sights and snap the firing button. Later, in the darkroom, you could tell whether you'd "hit him in a vital spot."

And so Steve Murray and the remnants of his fighter-pilot class passed on to Ottawa and the Rockcliff air station, where men and officers wait in a kind of clearing pool" for final disposition orders.

And there, recently, was where I met Steve Murray, an American Mid-western lad, just 21—a qualified fighter pilot with momentary expectations of being called to England on an early troop ship.

He wore the silver embroidered wings of the RCAF above his heart, braided triple chevrons on his arms and the little semi-circular tab, "Canada" on his shoulder.

But, like all other Americans, he would, in post war days, be privileged under Canadian bonus and pension laws and receive all the benefits of Canadian veteran legislation.

Not only that, said Steve Murray, but he and other active graduates of the air plan will receive preferential choice for the Canadian transcontinental air system.

"That is ..." added Steve as a final postulary, "if I survive, if England wins the war, and if there is any means of financing a transcontinental air system."

"Paper Bombs" is the title of Austen Lake's article in the RAF series for tomorrow.

FLEDGLINGS — Training to fly in the defense of England, these students show serious-minded determination as they go to class at No. 1 Initial Training School in Toronto.

This is another in the series of letters from Britons to friends or relatives in Boston.

To: Mrs. R. Jackson,
Newport, N. H.

From: Miss Flora Barnett,
London, England.

Dear Aunt Mill:

Thank you ever so much for your letter and I expect I owe you more than one as I have not been at home since the 4th of September, when the Silvertown factories and docks were bombed.

As our gas and water were off, I went to stay at Ilford with Aunt Alice's son, Dick, while we were there we had to get out for a time bomb, so came back home. Our Tom's wife had gone away with one of their boys and asked me to stay there, so I have been with him ever since and been getting his dinners. Otherwise he would have had to look after himself.

Well, I have sad news to tell you, Aunt Mill. Last Sunday my house was bombed and is down to the ground and all my home underneath. All I got is what I have with me, but I am not crying over that. All I am thankful for is that Jere and me were not in the house; otherwise we should not be alive to tell the tale. There are eight houses opposite to us and the shop next to me all down.

The funny part about it, Aunt, is that all the pictures are down except Alf's big photo in soldier's clothes, and that is not touched.

Well, I hope you are all well, and do ask all your people over there on munitions to work hard and help us in this terrible struggle. I never thought I should live to see things happen here like they have. I can't write any more, so Cheerio, Aunt, and may I ask you not to upset yourself too much over my loss. Love to all, from your loving niece.

Bengasi Is Captured With 3500 Italians

400 airline miles west of Bengasi, considerably farther by the curving coastal road along the gulf of Sidra.

British troops had been reported advancing steadily on Bengasi since the fall of Derna, Jan. 30, and were said Wednesday to be 60 miles from the stronghold.

ONLY ONE WAY OUT

British circles here had estimated the Italian garrison at Bengasi at fewer than 25,000 men. There was no immediate indication of their fate.

The only possible overland line of retreat for the Bengasi garrison was a highway leading south and then west along the coast across desert wastes to Tripoli.

Only a few small coastal towns lie between Bengasi and Tripoli. British circles previously have expressed belief that on Bengasi's fall, Graziani's next and final stand would be at Tripoli.

There were reports here that the Italians were preparing the Rex and other liners for use as troop transports, presumably, observers said, for an attempt to rush Italian and perhaps German reinforcements to North Africa, but the British have expressed confidence in their own ability to deal with any such move.

While the British North African armies concentrated on the capture of Bengasi, major operations in East Africa centered around the Eritrean town of Cheren, where 10,000 Italian troops sought to halt a British drive toward Asmara, the colonial capital.

The Fascist troops were said to be holding strong positions on high ground.

British circles here expressed belief that Marshal Graziani's position in North Africa is so bad that Premier Mussolini may be forced to risk his fleet in an attempt to move reinforcements and equipment across the Mediterranean to Libya.

The British, confident of the power of their own Mediterranean fleet, indicated they would welcome such an attempt. They exhibited little concern over the danger of German aerial intervention, declaring their recent bombing attacks on air bases at Catania, Sicily, and elsewhere, had interfered seriously with Nazi aspirations in this direction.

London Hails Bengasi Fall as Big Victory

LONDON, Feb. 7 (AP)—The Cairo announcement that "Bengasi is in our hands" was hailed by British military circles here today as meaning that "Cirenaica (Eastern Libya) has been captured by us."

The success at Bengasi marked the climax of a British drive of 160 miles in eight days.

These circles asserted the capture of the stronghold was accomplished by land forces with naval and air co-operation.

They pointed out that Bengasi not only was "a naval and air base and Marshal Graziani's headquarters but an advance base from which we can hammer German-occupied bases in Sicily."

The British advance, they said, progressed at a "tremendous pace" and encountered stubborn Italian resistance.

"It was no joy ride," these circles continued.

Rome Says Troops Battling British

ROME, Feb. 7 (AP)—British and Italian troops were reported by the Italian high command today to be fighting a "violent battle" south of the Libyan stronghold of Bengasi.

Fighting also was reported still in progress around Cheren, Eritrea, while in southern Ethiopia the Italians said their troops had repulsed a British attack.

The daily communique acknowledged that British warplanes had raided Asmara, the Eritrean capital, 42 miles southeast of Cheren, but said Italian fighters had "intervened" and that no "serious damage" was done. One of the British raiders was reported shot down.

London Shelter Dwellers Win in Mosquito Drive

LONDON, Feb. 7 (AP)—A mosquito invasion has been repulsed by London's air raid shelter dwellers.

People congregating underground, warm air and water attracted the pests in the early days of the Nazi air raids, and officials were flooded with complaints. The government then attacked the problem with a vengeance.

"Now we have driven off most of them," Alderman Key, chairman of the London shelters committee, said today. "Only a few big ones are left, and we'll get them soon.

"Despite the fact that it's winter upstairs, conditions below are almost ideal for mosquitoes."

THE FACT that the Greater Boston Community Fund Campaign has not only reached its goal of $4,883,000 but surpassed it by the impressive sum of $23,000 merits all the verbal orchids an editorial writer can find in his dictionary to bestow on so commendable an achievement.

Here is proof that at least one major community is still thinking about preserving civilization while a too large part of the rest of the world devotes its time and energy to destroying the fruits of centuries of progress.

And here, also, is evidence that men and women of different nationalities, ancestries and creeds can and will work together for their common welfare and advancement when they have the opportunity.

The Community Fund is non-sectarian, non-partisan and WHOLLY AMERICAN.

It strives to help the Jew as much as the Gentile and the Catholic as liberally as the Protestant.

What is equally as important, it attempts to do it as economically as possible so that campaign costs and administrative expenses may be kept to a minimum.

HOW WELL the Boston organization has succeeded in this effort is shown by the following table which illustrates the disposition of each Community Fund dollar:

Family service and relief agencies	21 cents
Hospitals	23 cents
Youth agencies and settlements	21 cents
Health agencies	10 cents
Children's service	8 cents
Handicapped, aged and general service	8 cents
Campaign and administrative costs	6 cents

Money raised by the Community Fund last year enabled 200 hospitals and health and social service agencies to perform valuable duties for more than 400,000 men, women and children in the 46 cities and towns of Metropolitan Boston.

These services included 1,055,868 days of hospital care to 82,412 patients, 978,756 examinations and treatments in clinics and dispensaries, 56,589 visits by district doctors to needy patients in their homes, 59,187 days of care in convalescent homes to 1932 patients, 355,405 calls by visiting nurses to 58,372 patients in their homes, and 38,160 days of care in maternity homes to 293 destitute mothers.

There were also food and clothing for 42,233 families, 107,970 meals and 56,414 nights' lodgings for homeless men, assistance for 20,815 travelers and runaways, legal aid for 10,996 needy persons, ear treatments for 14,071, including 11,994 children, and 173,850 days' care in homes for 638 aged men and women.

Further, 2034 blind persons received special services, 603 handicapped people obtained vocational instruction, 97,222 young people were enrolled in character-building agencies, and 6395 children were protected from abuse and neglect.

This year, because of increased contributions, the record will be even more impressive.

IT IS OBVIOUS that the average Community Fund contributor could not donate to each of the more than 200 benefiting hospitals and charitable agencies.

If he gave only a dollar to every one, his total expenditure would be substantially more than his weekly income.

But, through the Community Fund, he finds himself able to give according to his means to ALL.

And no matter how little or how much he gives, he can always know that the unfortunate men and women and children of our great metropolis are going to be assisted without regard to their race or creed.

We can think of no better example of American democracy at work.

FROM WASHINGTON comes news that two hundred cargo ships are going to be built.

Construction of the vessels will begin immediately in Los Angeles, Calif.; Portland, Ore.; Houston, Tex.; New Orleans, La.; Mobile, Ala.; Baltimore, Md., and Wilmington, N. C.

No mention there of Massachusetts or of any other New England State.

No recognition for the section that produced the still-famous Yankee Clippers.

Not a dollar to provide wages for the world's most skilful builders of commercial ships.

WHY?

The answer is simply that our Senators and Representatives in the nation's capital have been asleep.

Fortunately, the United States Government is going to contract for other ships.

Reputable spokesmen say the present orders for two hundred are "only a starter."

Let us hope the men who are supposed to be serving New England will be more alert next time.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

AMHERST, Mass., Thursday—The drive from New York City yesterday over the Merritt Parkway, up through Danbury and Simsbury to Amherst was very beautiful. The snow gleamed and sparkled in the sun and the bare trees were very lovely against the blue sky. We had no idea how long it would take us but everything went very smoothly.

The roads were clear and our one concern was whether we would find any inn open for lunch. Mrs. Morgenthau had set her heart on stopping at the White Turkey Inn, but when we got there, it was marked "closed for the winter."

In New Milford we found a gift shop and tea room combined and had a very good lunch. Some youngsters discovered that it was the President's wife who was inside and came in with the usual autograph books.

Finally, there arrived a young lady, quite breathless, who said she was the reporter for the weekly paper. Her questions were very few, her real concern was to get a young man, who had just enlisted in the Army, to come in and shake hands.

She told me his courage had failed him, so that I was evidently more terrifying than possible battles. But she went out and urged him in, and I hope he found the President's wife quite harmless.

WE REACHED Amherst a little before 4 o'clock. Bob Morgenthau met us and took us to our rooms. With great care, he had chosen rooms at the back of the inn because the birthday ball was being given and he thought, otherwise, we would be kept awake by the dancing.

There were flowers awaiting us from the political union. I am beginning to feel that these young people are not only extremely good organizers but very thoughtful and considerate of the comfort of their guests.

Several people dropped in to see me, all of whom I enjoyed. Then we dressed and prepared to meet the press and the photographers. President King came over to share this interview, and then Mrs. Morgenthau and I dined with President and Mrs. King.

THE HALL for the meeting was filled and the questions of the young men after my short talk seemed to me very thoughtful and interesting. The times are such that youth today is taking life very seriously.

I think this younger generation is going to face the realities of the world situation and the changes that have come about here and abroad with a more realistic understanding than ever before. This attitude in youth is what gives us greater hope for the future.

Another lovely day, and we are starting out now for Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges. It will be interesting to go from a man's college to colleges where there are only women.

I am looking forward to having an opportunity to hear the girls discuss their point of view on the national and international scene.

EDDIE "ROCHESTER" ANDERSON had his house built and furnished as an exact copy of the Beverly Hills, Cal., house of his boss, Jack Benny . . . Clyde Van Deusen is not the only man who had a horse named after him that won the Kentucky Derby. "Zev," the 1923 Kantucky Derby winner, was named after the noted Attorney William J. Zeverly . . . "Our cat prefers dog food and will eat nothing else," says a subscriber . . . Very unusual. But I know a woman in Arizona who had a cat that wagged its tail as a dog does. And when this cat had kittens, they all wagged their tails like dogs . . . What foreigners best master the English language? I believe Danes and Russians excel at this. I have known several Danes and Russians who speak English without the slightest trace of an accent.

SIDELIGHTS: A distinguished dentist with an equally distinguished clientele never fails to remark to his patients: "It is pyorrhea that causes the loss of more teeth than all other causes combined" . . . A successful man and wife team of architects is Mr. and Mrs. Victor Nurmi of Saginaw, Mich. There should be more such combinations, also more man and wife physician teams, legal associates, etc. Still when a man sees his wife during business hours and then also at home, it can be a strain on matrimonial happiness . . . Most of the "It" and "Oomph" of Hollywood cinema cuties is furnished by the studio make-up departments. In the current crop of stars only two are really natural "It" or "Oomph" girls.

ASIDES: That "shell of his former self" angle used as an excuse for the defeat of ring idols is becoming tiresome. Also it deprives the victor of credit due him. Its latest application has been to the Zivic-Armstrong fight. I believe Zivic won because he was the better man. He solved Armstrong's style of fighting and had Henry bewildered . . . A poll of divorcees' opinions has been taken. The man assigned to get expressions of opinions from divorcees must meet a lot of interesting people. Anyway, 50 per cent of the divorcees interviewed said they regretted their separation and wished they had their husband back again.

SIDELIGHTS: My nomination for the screwiest feminine style of all time is the Hobble Skirt . . . "A terrible bore is the wife who pampers little griefs," says Lady Asquith. She has something there. A whining woman is the female sex at nearly its worst.

SHAW STILL ANGRY AT TOSCANINI

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—Two years ago Gabriel Pascal—the only man to whom George Bernard Shaw will entrust the job of adapting his stories for the screen—planned a London production of "The Doctor's Dilemma," with Toscanini conducting the orchestra in Beethoven's Second during the death scene. Toscanini was amenable, but the war disrupted these plans. The impatient Shaw summoned Pascal and demanded: "What's happened to that production? Where's Toscanini?" . . . "The maestro can't come," the producer explained, "because of the war" . . . "War! war!" Shaw raged. "I'M here, am I not? The idea! I dont want to hear any more about him" . . . Last month a theatrical magazine invited Shaw to write an article about Toscanini. Shaw, still indignant because of the maestro's refusal to come to England in wartime, cabled: "No. He's a snob!"

GREETINGS: John Emery telephoned his wife, Tallulah Bankhead, who has been touring in "The Little Foxes." She revealed that she had sent Christmas cables to Winston Churchill and Lord Beaverbrook and that they had replied in acknowledgment . . . "Why'd you do that?" Emery asked. "With all the work they have to do, did you have to start an exchange of greetings?" . . . "I sent one to the President, also," Tallulah confessed. "With all the work Churchill and Beaverbrook have to do you'd think HE at least would have answered."

CHATTER: Tilly Losch has completed arrangements to return to England in April . . . Paul Whiteman is writing his autobiography in Florida . . . Arthur Kober is writing a song, using the title of his new book, "Bella, Bella, Got a Fella" . . . Tommy Corcoran will not leave the government service and will join the Little Cabinet . . . Speak either in French, German or English—or I'll cut you off."

DRAMA: Ten years ago Pirandello wrote a play for Marta Abba—a play called "Trovarsi," about an actress marrying a man who hates the theater. The heroine sacrifices her marriage to pursue her career on the stage . . . Marta Abba came to Broadway a few seasons ago in "Tovarich." Although she could speak no English, she memorized the lines, phonetically, and won the critics' praises. Since then, however, Miss Abba has not appeared in a play. For she met and married the polo playing Severance Milliken, the Cleveland millionaire—who hates the theater. And so Miss Abba sacrificed her career in favor of successful marriage.

SAVING: Gene Autry, the cowboy star, once worked for an independent film company which completed a movie in less than a week. This was accomplished by shooting the scenes only once, with no retakes, by using only a single set and by compelling all the employes to do extra services . . . "I had the same horse in those days," said Autry, patting the faithful animal, "a right smart horse. He can add and subtract, too" . . . "Did your bosses know that?" Gene was asked . . . "No," he answered. "They'd have made him work nights in the bookkeeping department."

CONFLICT: Ernest Hemingway and Martha Gellhorn, who left last week to report the war in the Orient, were very eager to return to covering the battlefront. The first time they had such a dual assignment was during the war in Spain. They were in Tortosa, which had to be evacuated, and the enemy troops were the Fascist legions of Rome . . . The Spaniards abandoned the town, leaving only one empty train, 12 civilians who couldn't be moved, and Hemingway and Gellhorn . . . The correspondents waited in the deserted town for the Fascists' arrival. They walked in the empty streets waiting. They sat in the empty bar waiting . . . Five days later the Fascists ventured into town—and the press in Rome announced the glorious capture of Tortosa after a five-day battle against the huge army which held it.

VARIETY, THE THEATRICAL trade-paper, says that a rival booking office will furnish attractions for the Civic Repertory Theater, only Boston legitimate theater not booked by the United Booking Office . . . BUT SOME OF BROADWAY'S most famous producers are reported by Variety as interested in the venture . . . Among them are The Playwrights Company (which presents the works of Robert E. Sherwood, Sam N. Behrman, Maxwell Anderson and Elmer Rice), Guthrie McClintic, husband of Katharine Cornell and producer of her plays; Gilbert Miller, Herman Shumlin, Oscar Serlin and Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay.

THIS GROUP HAS ACCOUNTED for a majority of the plays which have been successful in Boston in the past few years . . . Besides Boston, Baltimore, Chicago, Philadelphia and New York would have theaters in the circuit . . . Negotiations are now going on, Variety says.

In the first place, the night editor has been heckled by his conscience since the very minute when he chivalrously permitted himself to accept the molars as collateral.

THE LADY WILL SURELY remember that he protested mightily . . . The lady's word was really sufficient to insure the return of the three dollars ($3) . . . Doesn't she remember how gallantly he assured her so? . . . When the three dollars ($3) actually did come back by mail, as the lady had said it would, it was no surprise to the editor . . . It was an earth-shaking suspension of the natural order.

MORE—IT WAS THE FIRST successful "bite" in six years of nearly unanimous refusals to have a happy ending . . . (It was just a coincidence, however, that teeth were involved) . . . Won't she please send her address? . . . (For teeth-returning purposes only) . . . Doesn't the lady recall that it was only to affirm his own faith in her evident sincerity that the editor even consented to hold the teeth at all?

IT'S A NICE SET OF TEETH and the lady should be happy to get them back . . . Yes, a fine set of teeth . . . But the editor has his own, and the lady's substitute set won't even fit him in the future.

HE GETS TOP ROLE IN COMEBACK

By Louella O. Parsons

Nils Asther

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7—You never know your luck in Hollywood. Nils Asther, who's been hanging around for months without getting a break, was signed today for one of the top spots in "Night of January 16th" with Robert Preston and Ellen Drew. There was a time when Nils made feminine hearts flutter aplenty when he played with G. Garbo and other glamour girls.

Then all the bad luck in the world seemed to break for him at once. He lost his savings in a bank crash, his marriage with Vivian Duncan went on the rocks and his career waned.

He's still tall, dark and handsome as ever and I hope this break in Sol Siegel's opus will be the chance he's been waiting for.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

JUST AS SOON as Olivia de Havilland is well enough to work she will check in at the Paramount studios on a loan-out from Warners. She is to have an important role opposite Charles Boyer and Paulette Goddard in Arthur Hornblow's production, "Hold Back the Dawn," the much discussed Kitti Fring's book.

But loaning Olivia isn't as simple as all that. Deals between studios seldom are. In return for the De Havilland girl, who does her best work since "Gone With the Wind," in "Strawberry Blonde," Warners will get Fred MacMurray.

I believe there should be more lending of stars in Hollywood, for when you see the same combinations of actors again and again it gets monotonous. The stars, too, like to go visiting on other lots. Robert Cummings is in seventh heaven. He has been at Metro and he will check in at 20th for "Miami." And then of course there is the Jean Arthur picture for him, and Universal profits in the long run by having him in important pictures.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Franchot Tone's mother is here and will probably buy the Wayne Morris-Bubbles Schinasi home; Fay Bainter just left the Santa Monica Hospital after a jaw operation; Mark Hellinger will host a big party at Ciro's for Quentin Reynolds when Reynolds arrives here. The proceeds will be turned over to the British war relief.

Went to Santa Anita the second time this year and if George Raft's horse, Irrelevant, had won I would have been a rich woman, but it failed me as it did him. He was with Betty Grable and the Jim Ritzes. Betty had put on a few extra pounds, which aren't yet noticeable and so she has been ordered to diet by the studio.

AL VANDERBILT was lucky as usual. He is a conservative bettor but he did put a small wager on Son of War which romped home to the tune of $29 for $2; June Lang, who is still the prettiest girl in Hollywood, was with John Roselli, her bridegroom, and Mrs. David Butler.

• • •

MRS. JACK WARNER and Mrs. Charlie Feldman arrived in time to see Son of War win from all the highly touted thoroughbreds; Jack Benny had a welcome home party at the Mocambo with the Herbert Marshalls, the Ronald Colmans, Reginald Gardiner and Mary Livingstone.

The new gold bracelet Bonita Granville is wearing was given her by Jackie Cooper for her 15th birthday; Dick Foran and Jane Larkin rhumbaing at the Florentine Gardens.

THE NEW YORK PLAYS are being gobbled up like mad by Hollywood studios these days. There was a period when most of them went abegging for the reason they were so censorable they weren't good movies. But now, ah me, ah me, it is different! The moment a play opens on Broadway there is a producer's representative right there ready to put in a bid as soon as the curtain falls.

Hal Wallis, who has been in New York, has had a perfect spree of seeing plays with the result that he is buying right and left. "Old Acquaintance," with Peggy Wood and Oriole Lee, Virginia Fields' aunt, is the latest to fall under the hammer to Warners. That's the play, if you remember, that was shown at the inauguration at the request of President Roosevelt.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MORE of that flock of "Regular Citizens'" letters. Americans from every station playing Columnist for a Day. This time it's H. FRANCIS BROWN of Malone, N. Y., broadcasting on this subject of PLAY. Play time for Young America—do or don't they get too much of it in our public schools. And what to do about it.

"Times have changed," says Friend Brown, "and we must admit it. Once upon a time, youngsters trudged three or four miles a day to the little red school house. Now they ride in heated buses. Once they did chores around the house, before and after school. Now there are no chores, even in the suburbs.

"So, to fill their idle hours, the schools — particularly the high schools—have invented a program of 'recreation and sport' for which the youngsters get credits as if they were real work. The whole idea being to prepare them for the added leisure of our modern life.

"BUT HOW ABOUT PREPARING FOR THE ADDED RESPONSIBILITY OF OUR MODERN LIFE . . . THE ADDED DISCIPLINE? . . . ENGLAND . . . GERMANY . . . ITALY . . . RUSSIA . . . ALL THESE NATIONS, WHETHER WE APPROVE OF THEM OR NOT, ARE PREPARING THEIR YOUTH FOR STRONG RESPONSIBILITY.

"The average high school youngster's actual hours of study and classes lasts around five hours. Then he, or she, goes out to play some sort of game until five or six, and pretends that is part of the regular high school course.

"THIS BUSINESS OF FIVE HOURS OF STUDY AND SIX OR EIGHT HOURS OF PLAY DOESN'T MAKE SENSE. AND TO MY MIND, ALL THE FIFTH COLUMNISTS IN AMERICA COULDN'T DO AS MUCH HARM AS THESE IDIOTIC EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS ARE DOING.

"Every sensible citizen should realize that this idle time, among nearly-grown boys and girls, is far too precious to waste. Mechanics and 'grease monkeys' are becoming as necessary as doctors and lawyers. If we are to remain a great nation.

"I honestly believe that the vanity and laxity of parents and the bifalutin' theories of teachers, who have never known practical life themselves, are more responsible for juvenile delinquency than all the underworld influences put together."

You Can Do Miracles With Baking Powder

By MARTHA LEE

Baking powder biscuit dough, with various minor changes, is the foundation for numerous quick breads and desserts, as well as for dumplings and shortcakes. Of course, you have to start off with a good biscuit and a few hints in this direction may spell the difference between a delicious flaky product and the oft ridiculed "leaden" variety.

To get a flaky biscuit we do not mix the flour and shortening too finely. Flours differ in the amount of liquid they will absorb; therefore, all but 1 or 2 tablespoons of liquid should be added immediately. The rest, if needed, should be added as quickly as possible, stirring vigorously for one minute. Knead the mixture lightly for about 30 seconds; roll and cut. Rolled and cut scuits may be kept in the refrigerator 30 to 40 minutes before baking.

The action of different types of baking powder varies, too. With some, more than the average amount is needed to get proper raising. With others, if by mistake, somewhat more is used than is needed, the biscuits may have a bitter taste and an uneven texture. However, if an all-phosphate baking powder with "controlled action" is used, two-thirds of the raising takes place during the mixing, while the rest waits to finish the full leavening during the baking process.

BASIC BAKING POWDER BISCUITS

2 cups sifted flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
6 tbsp. shortening
2-3 cup milk (about)

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on floured surface and knead gently for 30 seconds. Roll out to ½-inch to ¾-inch thickness. Cut into rounds of desired size and place on greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven (450 deg. F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 18 biscuits (2-inch diameter).

APPLE MARSHMALLOW DUMPLING

6 medium-sized apples, quartered
1½ cups water
1 tsp. salt
24 marshmallows
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
1 cup sifted flour
2 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
3 tbsp. shortening
½ cup milk
8 marshmallows

Cook apples in water until tender. Add salt and marshmallows. Cook over low heat until marshmallows melt. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut in shortening. Add milk to make a soft dough. Drop by spoonfuls on top of hot apple mixture. Put one marshmallow on top of each dumpling. Cover closely and steam 20 minutes without removing cover. Serve hot with heavy cream. Makes 8 servings.

We wish that space permitted our saying more about the various ways that biscuit dough can be used. However, we will tell you about a new set of booklets that may be had free of charge, containing dozens of bright ideas not only for biscuit variations, but for muffins, cakes and cookies of all kinds. Just write to Rumford Baking Powder, Box L, Rumford, R. I.

SHRIMP SHORTCAKE

Use ½ Basic Baking Powder Biscuit recipe. While hot, split and fill and top with shrimp mixture. Sprinkle with freshly grated cheese and garnish with watercress and ripe olives. Makes 4 servings.

SHRIMP MIXTURE

4 tbsp. butter
½ tsp. salt
4 tbsp. flour
1½ cups milk
1 cup cooked and cleaned shrimp.

Melt butter, add salt and flour and blend until smooth. Add milk and continue stirring until slightly thickened. Add the shrimp and heat thoroughly. Can be kept in upper part of double boiler.

CORN MEALIES

Substitute ½ cup yellow corn meal for ½ cup flour in Basic Baking Powder Biscuit recipe. Roll into rectangular shape ¼-inch thick and brush with melted butter. Cut into strips 1-inch wide and pile six of these one on top of the other. Cut crosswise into 1½-inch pieces; place on end in greased muffin pans and separate the layers slightly with a knife. Bake in hot oven (450 deg. F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 12 to 14

You Can Be Beautiful

A Perfume With Mystery!

By ARLINE GOULD

IF YOU ever needed a shot of glamour . . . you need it now. Your budget probably doesn't allow an advance purchase of something springy . . . a suit to go under your weatherbeaten furs . . . or a hat [illegible] with dashes, with dazzle-trimmed shoes to match . . . but it certainly does allow the purchase of a new perfumed eau de cologne, about which there's a lot of luscious [illegible] whisper-ing.

What said the whispering about? Well, we can't exactly come right out flat-footed and tell. But they do say the [illegible] perfume which [illegible] comes in a cologne and [illegible] is less expensive than [illegible] vital to [illegible] and [illegible] centers. [illegible] that's certainly [illegible]

It's a scent that men notice. Now you've tried innumerable fragrances, no doubt. And you may have found something that simply entranced you . . . you could literally breathe it in for hours . . . it made you feel extra specially exciting. But it was a flop with the men in your life. You might just as well have used a dash of Eau for all anyone noticed or cared.

But not this scent. Definitely no. It is a shade mysterious . . . but don't let that worry you. It isn't a "he might just exclaim . . . as always as false excuses . . . it's really very subtle in its commanding way. Not a flower lifted by any means . . . not light nor heavy. There's that word again. It's en-[illegible]

If you'd like details on this new perfumed eau de cologne . . . phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week days except Saturday, or write care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Here Is M'Lady's New Spring Ensemble

YOU CAN'T BEAT reefer for svelte chic. You can't beat it for adaptability, either . . . it looks as well with casual accessories, a brimmed felt hat and chamois-tinted gloves, as it does with a confection of a flower hat and the nicest white doeskins you own. An ensemble like this is truly a clothes investment . . . for it yields a very smart dress, to be worn with other things or without the reefer later on in May, as well as a coat which may be worn with skirts and blouses. This one manages the "sleek through-the-hips" look that takes off pounds. It has an eased fullness in the bodice at the normal waistline. And is made of a wonderful new smooth wool, with a dress of sheer crepe and matching lining. Spick-and-span pique pipes the neckline of both dress and coat. You'll love it in navy. It's about $60 for the complete costume, in sizes 12-20; we'll be delighted to give you shopping information; just write or phone the Fashion and Beauty department.—ANNICE BRINK.

CHIC AND PRACTICAL is the happy combination of the above ensemble, described in the adjoining column by Annice Brink.

LOOKIT WHAT YOU MISSED!
SWAN— THE FIRST REALLY NEW WHITE FLOATING SOAP SINCE THE GAY NINETIES
SWAN
SWAN
PURE · FLOATING · MILD

It's better, better, better! 8 ways better!

1. Whiter! Pure and mild as imported castile! A soap as gentle as a lullabye—that's pure white Swan! As kindly a floating soap as ever gave soothing lather for a baby's skin.

2. Suds 2 times quicker! Better? Wait till you see Swan billow into suds two times quicker than old-style floating soaps. Suds that last as much as 24% longer, too.

3. Firmer! Swan lasts longer! Often, you can stick your thumb right into old-style floating soap—it's so soft and moist. Not Swan! It's harder. Has much less moisture, so you know it will last longer. Gee, that's a satisfaction!

4. Swell lather in hard water! What if your tap water's hard! Swan'll burst into eager, upstanding suds just the same. This surprising new floating soap will give you suds even in ice-water.

5. A smoother break! Easy as pie (without knife or string) you break Swan into 2 lovely cakes. Swan's designed to look right as a household bar or two lovely toilet cakes!

6. Smells much cleaner—fresher! There's something wonderfully bracing and clean about the way Swan smells.

7. Feels smoother, finer-textured! Creamed 64 times a minute.

8. More real soap for your money! Swan has much less moisture than old-style floating soaps. So you get more real soap for your money. No need to store a supply to dry out. We do it for you.

Double your money back if—Compare Swan with your favorite floating soap. Use it for bath; baby; dishes; silks. If you don't say—"Swan's better!"—send us the wrapper, and we'll refund double the purchase price. Swan, Cambridge, Mass. Offer closes Feb. 21, 1941.

Two convenient sizes —large and regular!

IT WAS NICE OF YOU TO LET MISS TEASLEY WALK UNDER YOUR UMBRELLA
HOW DID YOU KNOW? IS IT TRUE WHAT THEY SAY WIVES CAN SEE AROUND CORNERS?
MRS. CLARK SAW YOU PASS HER HOUSE AND SHE PHONED ME IMMEDIATELY
YOU CAN'T BEAT THAT GRAPEVINE

MAN, the Psalmist says, is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward. And even if he dodges the natural hazards, he'll pick up any extra grief that is laying around. That is because he really is an animal, the fiercest and wiliest of them all.

You can get a good picture of him in the raw by reciting the Seven Deadly Sins, Pride, Covetousness, Lust, Anger, Gluttony, Envy and Sloth. Add them all up and you have Natural Man who is born with Lust in his soul, Murder in his brain and Larceny in his heart.

Since millions and millions of people, all equipped with these charming little traits would exterminate each other if allowed to express them, society has worked out two instruments with which to curb them. They are Public Opinion and the Law. Public opinion is the horrified reaction to any crime of people who would do the same thing if they dared or had the opportunity. The Law metes out penalties for acting natural. These are the wages of sin and they run from various terms of imprisonment to Capital Punishment.

The two deterrents, Public Opinion and the Law, work remarkably well as a general rule. They are responsible for all the virtues, which are the "not do's" of our natural instincts, Humility (no Pride), Honesty (won't steal), Chastity (loves strictly within the Law), Moderation (don't hog). Most people aim for these and untangle their impulses.

But every now and then, the natural impulse breaks through and you see a normal citizen turn into a criminal in the split second it takes to send a bullet into a human heart or to lift a bundle of money from where it should be to where it shouldn't. Such a thing happened to Sam Smallman.

AN ORDINARY MAN

Sam was an average—well, nearly average—citizen. Up to his thirtieth year, he was the man next to you in the subway or at the ball game. He was the guy who said, "Let's have just one more and then go home." He voted as his district captain told him and went to church on Sunday.

In appearance, he was a lot like the fellow who lives next door or in the partment on the floor above. On a passport picture, he looked like you or me or a second-story man. He was so nondescript that you had to meet him five times before you began to remember he existed.

His job sounded big but wasn't exciting. He was a guard on an armored truck. He got the job when he was 20. It offered him no opportunity for advancement when he started and it offered no more 10 years later.

He and another guard and the driver made up the truck's crew. Their job was to carry money around the city from banks to offices, excavations, buildings and boats with payrolls to meet. They picked the money up at the banks and transported it to where the various firms paid off.

Their routine gave Sam a bang until it became a habit. When handling money, one man carried it while the other stood or walked a few paces behind him with his revolver all ready to blast any thief who tried to attack the carrier. The driver covered both from his seat with another revolver.

In bringing money from a bank to a payroom, the guard who was doing the guarding stepped down. Then both drew their guns and the carrier emerged with the money and the other two guarded him in and out of wherever he was going.

The procedure got monotonous to Sam after 10 years during which nothing ever happened. Nobody ever tried to stick them up. If they did, the chances were they would have gotten away with the money because the guards' motions were all reflexes. They had quit thinking that they might be stuck up.

If Sam had been a thinking man, he might have realized that in 10 years he must have been within reaching distance of about a billion dollars. But he wasn't a thinking man. The money he saw didn't appear to him as money. It appeared as cloth bags filled with metal coins and oblong sheets of green paper.

Sam was too busy leading his sluglike life. He fell victim to the pangs of the cosmic urge and got married. He found out he didn't like his wife, so, after she had two babies, he told her to get out. He supported the family at a distance for as little every week as his wife would stand for. He got more or less drunk on his days off but he never missed a day of work because of it. Drink didn't lift him into a realm of wildness. It made him a little less glum and more intelligent.

It improved him. He listened to a radio whenever one happened to be around. His tastes were simple and well within his means. He was what writers call, "The man in the street" and "the backbone of this country." He was a pain in whatever part of your body you want to name. Until Annie Loose came into his life.

AN AMBITIOUS GIRL

She entered carrying a plate of ham-and-beans because she was a waitress in the Coffee Pot where Sam ate lunch. She was no raving beauty. But her eyes were bright, her mouth was smiling and she had a figure that attracted men's eyes. Sam took one look at her and was in love.

At first, she would have no part of him. But he was persistent and he spent money on her. After a while, she got used to him. After a while, he got the idea she loved him. Maybe she did. It isn't important. What is important is the fact that she was a wanter. She wanted a new dress, a new compact, new stockings, new shoes. She wanted a car and a little chicken farm out in Jersey because she had been raised on a farm.

Sam bought her the dress, the compact, the shoes and the stockings. He never thought of the car and the farm. But Annie still wanted them. After a while, she hinted that she believed she knew a man who would get them for her.

For the first time in his life, Sam's imagination creaked into action. He imagined the guy who could buy Annie a car and a farm. He didn't like the way he imagined he looked. He imagined killing him. But he had to do better than that because Annie became noticeably cooler to him.

Sam used to sit in the parked truck, entirely surrounded by. During the process, he had touched a large, heavy canvas bag. It was money. Sam looked at it, tucked it under his arm and walked away from there. It was as simple as that. Later, he counted it. There was $27,000.

He went wild. He hid the money in a large coffee can in his room. He didn't even run away at first. The first night, he went over on Third Avenue and bought drinks "for the house" in ten different saloons. It cost him forty dollars. He got drunk. Next day, he read in the paper he was wanted. He moved over to Newark.

From there, he telephoned Annie at the Coffee Pot. He told her he had a lot of money and to quit her job and join him. She had the papers, too. She quit and joined him. They bought a farm outside of Elizabeth. They bought clothes. They lived a fine life for a week. Sam would have married her only he was already married and he wouldn't commit bigamy. That was a crime.

He bought a car and he and Annie achieved a budget of $100 a day but the problem of spending his stolen money soon became enormous. It got so it kept him awake at night. He would wake up Annie.

"Hey, Annie," he'd say, "think money, and wonder where he could raise some dough. One day, the driver and the other guard got off the truck to eat. Sam was so lovesick, he couldn't eat so he sat on the truck, mirroring it. He went into his old routine of wondering where he could get some dough. Or something you want. Something that costs big dough.

"A diamond," Annie would say sleepily and fall asleep again.

SADDER AND WISER

So he bought her a diamond and other jewelry and a fur coat and all the clothes she wanted. He bought more chickens and all the appurtenances of a chicken ranch. He bought himself the same things. And he still had dough, lots of it. Every time he looked in the can, he thought somebody had put more money in. It never seemed to grow less.

It began to obsess him. He got to buying drinks for the house in every saloon he entered. He got to tipping waitresses $10 for serving a 35-cent meal. He thought of giving Annie a lot of money but he had grown so removed that whenever anybody gave him anything for nothing, the giver was a sucker. He didn't give Annie any money.

They lasted out the week and when they brought him into the station, he was glad. They went out and searched the chicken farm and found $800 he had carelessly left in full view of Annie. Annie saw it but she wouldn't touch it. As she told the police, she was an honest woman and had never taken a penny in her life.

They gave Sam eight years. After his sentence, he offered this advice to youth:

"Never steal any dough," he advised, "unless you know how to spend it. If you don't, it'll drive you nuts."

off a great deal of weight a year ago, and hasn't put it back.

"I stay on my low-calorie diet most of the time, but week-ends or on special occasions I eat anything," he said. "I weigh myself every day, and I don't mind gaining one or two pounds. But as soon as I gain the third, I go right to work and take the three off."

So I don't feel terribly unhappy about that half-pound.

You bet I'll take it off, though, and more with it. I can get into size 12 dresses, and even into slacks without looking like a cartoon. I should give that up for chocolate cake!

What's this? Mary seems to be giving herself a regular fight talk. Well, if you get worried enough, Mary, you'll work hard enough to achieve your purpose. We're with you 100 per cent, minus half a pound.

'YOU'RE THE ONE,' FEATURE AT PARAMOUNT, FENWAY

You may not find out who Yehudi is, but you'll see Jerry Colonna and his handle-bar moustache, along with little Bonnie Baker and Orrin Tucker and his band at the Paramount and Fenway, where the tuneful "You're the One" is the main attraction. Miss Baker sings in that wee voice of hers, Mr. Tucker gives out with his swing-ering, and Mr. Colonna runs a weight-reducing sanitarium.

Just keeping up with what goes on at Jerry's combination night club and lunatic asylum, inhabited by luscious lovelies and jitterbugs, ought to take off the pounds better than Doc Hauser's most stringent diet. Not that Bonnie has to bother about counting calories. What she does have to do is transform herself from a brunette to a blonde and follow bandmaster Albert Dekker to Dr. Colonna's retreat to wangle her way into a big radio contract.

Edward Everett Horton is her manager, with the staggering monicker of Death Valley Joe Frink, which gives you a rough idea of the laughs in store at the Zeno Springs sanitarium. It's Colonna who gathers in most of the chuckles. Also it's the first time all these radio favorites have been featured together on the screen so that their fans should have a time for themselves.

Rene Riano and Teddy Hart are a couple of recruits from the stage who get their quota of laughs, too, and the good tunes you'll be hearing are "Strawberry Lane," "I Could Kiss You For That," "Gee, I Wish I'd Listened to My Mother," and, of course, the popular title song.

Warren William is hot on the heels of the underworld once again in "Lone Wolf Keeps a Date," the other feature at the twin houses. William is as slick and suave as always, and this time Frances Robinson, Bruce Bennett, Eric Blore, Thurston Hall and Jed Prouty are all involved.

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 7 (AP)—Daniel R. Topping, 29-year-old Greenwich millionaire sports man and husband of Sonja Henie, was reported physically unfit for military service today by Eban F. Putnam, chairman of the selective service board here.

Topping, owner of the Brooklyn professional football club, was given a class 4 F rating in the physical examination he took on Jan. 22, said Putnam.

The officer was removed to the hospital from the property clerk's office, to which he had been attached since July 1, 1931. He is survived by a widow, Ethel Fitzgerald.

'FLIGHT COMMAND' ENDING LOEW'S STATE RUN TODAY

Love Comedy Heads New Bill

This is the final day for the State program headed by "Flight Command," which has Robert Taylor in the starring role, and for the "Gone With the Wind" engagement at the Orpheum, with Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh topping the big Selznick cast.

Tomorrow both Loew houses will present a new double bill featuring "This Thing Called Love," romantic comedy starring Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas. On the bill with this Columbia production is "Nobody's Children," which comes from the same studio and is heralded as a screen version of a popular radio feature. Edith Fellows and Billy Lee head the cast.

"This Thing Called Love" is domestic comedy in which the wife insists on soft pedal and slow tempo on the affections because she has heard about so many marriages going on the rocks. She thinks she knows how to prevent a wreck, but the two of them are pretty good samples of wrecks before the platonic experiment is over. Being madly in love with each other they almost go daffy trying to obey the "Now, darling, please!" rules.

Alexander Hall directed for Columbia and he knows his comedy, as he proved in "He Stayed for Breakfast," "His Girl Friday," "Here I Wife," "The Doctor Takes a Wife" and other films with domestic cuckoo effects.

Binnie Barnes, Allyn Joslyn, Gloria Dickson, Lee J. Cobb and Gloria Holden are in the very fancy cast.

BINNIE BARNES is only one of the very fancy cast appearing in "The Thing Called Love" at Loew's State and Orpheum tomorrow.

Howard Giving Midnight Show

The "Step Lively Girls" burlesquers will be the attraction for the midnight show at the Old Howard tonight. The performance starts at 11:30.

In the cast are Hinda Wassau, Ceil von Dell, Billy "Cheese 'n Crackers" Hagen, Sammy Smith, Patricia Morgan, Olga Brace, the Ballatores, the Rexfords, Son & Sonny; Ross, Rosa & Ross, Charles Harris, Pearl Mylie, Stanley Simmonds, Elaine & Jean Costello, and Vinia Vale.

'Western Union,' at Met, Packed With Pioneer Thrills

Randolph Scott Heads Star Trio

From Omaha to Salt Lake City may be just a hop, skip and a jump via air lines. But it's a long and hazardous journey in "Western Union," the big news at the Met this week. This horse opera de luxe goes back to the empire-building and frontier-crashing days of the 60's when the Injuns still rode the plains, and cattle rustling and horse thieving were the "rackets" of an exciting and colorful Wild West.

Robert Young, Randolph Scott and Dean Jagger are the three musketeers who battle it out with bad man Barton MacLane, with a little friendly rivalry on the side between Bob and Randy for the affections of telegrapher Virginia Gilmore, whose chief distinction seems to be that she's the only girl in the cast.

There's a lot more romance in the story of the singing wires than there is in Virginia's ever dalliance with Injuns, and between Indian raids and shootings, arson, and murder you won't miss those close-up clinches at all.

Dean Jagger is Virginia's brother, and the chemist in charge of the big push through the wilderness, and when ex-outlaw Scott saves his life Jagger takes him on as scout and assistant. The debonair Mr. Young is the Yankee Doodle dandy whose dad put up the money for the project, and although he hits the open spaces looking like something dreamed up out of the Esquire of the times, he soon shows the cow punchers that he's no tenderfoot.

The first catastrophe is that the camp's cattle are stolen, leaving poor cook Slim Summerville looking longingly at a placid little donkey who might end up as a tasty dish of stew. Then the horses are stolen, presumably by hostile Indians only to show up next day "for sale" by the villainous MacLane. Scott and MacLane seem to know each other pretty well, too, and when the whole camp is destroyed in a raging forest fire, it all looks bad for Randy, who just didn't happen to be there at the time.

There's a terrific build-up for the gun fight at the end, when to justify himself Scott battles it out with the bigger man, who turns out to be his brother, and a scoundrel if there ever was one. Lee Young looks that bodice off nicely, though but too late to save his pal. Maybe Bob gets the girl instead.

The Case of the Dead Parrot, the other Met feature has William Landigan, Eddie Foy, Jr., and Paul Cavanagh in important roles.

GENE TIERNEY and John Sutton provide a romantic interest in "Hudson's Bay" and starring Paul Muni, which will follow the record-smashing run of "Kitty Foyle" at Keith Memorial.

Bardo's Band Keith-Boston Hit

The best band to hit town for a long time is Bill Bardo and his Band at the Keith-Boston as versatile a group of instrumentalists and entertainers as any baker's dozen you'll find. These are the boys who played at the R. C. Victory Ball after the Super Bowl win and little old N. Awarra must have had a little of them.

Band at best is a leader who's got cheap more than a facile personality and a few gags to sell. Bill Bardo can sing and good. And excellent is his fiddling, which is really swell.

All his arrangements are novel ten. "Blue Skies" and "Fine Feathered Friendship" Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" Party and at the Ritz have certain cut the vocals too. Bardo, Jean Hersholt and Henry Armetta in "Caught in the Act" are the season's best bets.

'Both Barrels' Hit Dodgers, But Corum Hits Back

By BILL CORUM

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—My friend, Jack Mulcahy, forwards a "Both Barrels" column of Jack McDonald's from the Coast in which the latter gives our Brooklyn Dodgers both barrels for arranging a 48-game exhibition schedule this spring. McDonald calls this hippodroming, and he is quite right.

Larry MacPhail

But we are highly sensitive on the subject of our Dodgers back here, and I cannot let McDonald get away with this long distance sniping, even though he has got a double-barreled gun.

The basic idea of spring training is ballyhoo and hippodroming, if you like, and nobody knows it better than Jack McDonald.

Not even John McDonald, the secretary of our Dodgers, knows it better. And he, John, just has made his customary early spring prediction that the Brooks would play to more than a million fans during the coming season.

Which is par for the course for them in recent years. In the regular season, that is. The fans they will entertain during their spring training tour will be to-boot. Just that much velvet.

But let us acquaint you with what the California McDonald has to say before we set about answering him in the fair name of Brooklyn.

"The various ways baseball has of interpreting hippodroming," he writes, "which it shuns like arsenic, are at times confusing.

"Lefty O'Doul, for example, isn't allowed to wave a red, white or even a blue handkerchief at the opposing pitcher from the third base coaching line because that is called hippodroming.

"Though Arnold Statz is manager of the Angels, he cannot come in from his playing position in the outfield (Heavenly days, Jack, is Jigger still playing the outfield? He used to be the center-fielder for the Confederates in the Civil War!) to protest a decision because this is called hippodroming.

"An all-star cast of big leaguers is allowed only a week to get in its financial licks at post-season exhibition contest after the World Series. For any more than that is called hippodroming.

"Even if Japan would let 'em in, an organized group of athletes can't junket in the Orient any more because that is now called hippodroming.

"BUT THE BROOKLYN DODGERS are going to be allowed to play 48 exhibition games before the opening of the season and this, apparently, baseball interprets as not hippodroming.

"The Dodgers start their exhibition chores Feb. 14, going to Cuba to avoid snow flurries. They do not wind up their tour until a day or two before the mayor tosses out the ball for the first game of the National League season.

"By which time the Dodgers already will have played the equivalent of a third of the season . . . Since football athletes tire both mentally and physically playing ten games a season, most of them in cool, invigorating weather, wonder how the Dodgers will feel in the Dog Days of August, which is about the time the real racing begins in the National League?

That last question, Jack, will be answered when the Dog Days come. I have a hunch they'll be both feeling, and doing, a little bit of all right. Let's just keep it in mind and see.

You, however, either carelessly or carefully omit one important thing about that 48-game training schedule. It isn't going to be played by one Brooklyn team, but by TWO.

So we'll have to cut the ardors and rigors of it all for the poor, downtrodden athlete in half right at the outset.

Instead of sitting on the bench watching the other fellow play, MacPhail is going to try to keep every man in a Brooklyn uniform in action.

I think it an excellent idea. Always have thought so, and this isn't the first time it has been tried by a big league club by any means.

I have been going to major league training camps, without a miss, for nineteen springs, and my observation has been that too many of

CONNIE MACK UPHOLDS LANDIS WAIVER DECREE

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 7 (INS)—Connie Mack today stands foursquare behind Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Landis' New Haven decree because it gives budding diamond stars a break and, as a whole, will benefit big league baseball.

Under the edict, a minor league player purchased by a big league nine while subject to the draft cannot be returned to the minors on option unless waivers are obtained.

Some baseball magnates aver it is confiscation of property rights and will make it possible for "scavenger clubs" to obtain players developed by wealthy clubs without the latter's heavy overhead.

But the venerable leader of the cellar-dwelling Athletics takes a different stand.

"Judge Landis," Connie says, "is looking after the interest of young players, and his ruling is perfectly proper and is absolutely right.

"The commissioner wants these youngsters to get a real chance in the majors and his ruling will benefit baseball by keeping the best material in the big leagues."

RULE WILL HELP A'S

Connie voiced his views, based on 60 years experience in playing the game and managing the A's, during an exclusive interview with International News Service just before he entrained for the Athletics' training camp in California.

The genial tactician made no bones about believing and hoping the edict would aid such perennial second division clubs as his own.

In fact, Connie emphasized that he would be right there with the $7500 waiver price whenever a budding star appears. And there are likely to be many on the market as the Yankees alone will have to drop 10 hopefuls next May 15.

"As you know," said Mack, "there have been many players who have been juggled a little, and for that reason, too, I think Judge Landis' stand is perfectly justified.

"When the commissioner sees something he can do to improve the game, he goes through with it. I don't see how anyone can object to that.

"The commissioner's ruling," Connie continued, "is going to make club managers think twice before paying high prices for minor league players.

"Often a wealthy club outbids a league rival for a minor leaguer it cannot use and doesn't need.

"The player is sent to a farm team, and thus the other club is stopped from gaining a player who would strengthen it.

"At the same time, such deals block youngsters from getting their chance in the majors."

NO FORECASTING

In commenting on the forthcoming season, Connie declined to make any predictions. A year ago he forecast that the Yanks, then flying their fourth consecutive world championship flag, would finish third. They did.

"I'm not afraid to climb out on the limb," chuckled the sage of Shibe Park, "but it's just hard to make a choice.

"The teams are pretty evenly matched, and the breaks of the game are going to decide the outcome of the league races. For instance, a drafted player might cost a team the pennant.

"The Yanks are going to be dangerous, but they can be beaten. They might even drop back to fourth place, while Cleveland is bound to come in first, second or third.

"As for the A's, I don't want to say where we'll finish, but we have a much improved club; one that might surprise many of the other clubs a little this year."

PIED PIPER. Connie Mack, patriarch of the A's, is mobbed by Philadelphia kids as he entrains for training base at Anaheim, Cal. Connie, now 78, believes the A's will do well in A. L. race this year.

Three Records Due to Fall In Penn Meet

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 7 (INS)—Perhaps it's asking too much, but three track marks—50-yard high hurdles, one-mile and two-mile runs—may be written into the books at the annual indoor Penn Athletic Club meet at Convention Hall tonight.

Meet Director Lawson Robertson, Penn track mentor, has supplied the ingredients for an orgy of standard-smashing by lining up six athletes recently chosen on the Amateur Athletic Union All-American squad by Daniel J. Ferris.

There's Fred Wolcott, Rice Institute who set a new world mark of 7.2 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles at the recent Millrose games.

Then there's Walter Mehl, Wisconsin ace who has promised to try for a new international standard in the star-studded mile event.

Young Mehl's toughest obstacles will be Charles Fenske, Wisconsin star and another All-America whom Robertson believes may find his stride about this time, and John Munski, Sugar Bowl mile winner.

The third possible record-breaking event—the two-mile—will be contested by All-America Greg Rice of South Bend; Don Lash, Indiana cop; Forest Efaw, Oklahoma, and Tommy Deckard, Indiana, 1940 surprise winner.

Due in Army, Casey in Bed With Grippe

Steve "Crusher" Casey, former world heavyweight wrestling champion from Ireland, faced a temporary delay in his induction into the U. S. Army today with la grippe threatening to postpone his physical examination.

Casey was to have reported to the examining board tomorrow for a doctor's examination at Local Draft Board 32 in Dorchester.

Famed for his "Kerry flip," which led him to the title, Casey was a bit "blue" because of the delay.

The 30-year-old Irishman, having taken out his first naturalization papers, volunteered for duty as a member of Uncle Sam's armed forces.

The odds dropped to 7 to 5 today, with Soose still favorite. Promoter Mike Jacobs has promised the winner a bout with Champion Ken Overlin for the middleweight title.

200,000 See Sports Show At Mechanics

With six days of the New England Sportsmen's and Boat Show already history, the turnstiles have clicked to a merry tune of nearly 200,000 customers, and with three more days left it is a certainty that the week-end crowds will bring the total attendance mark to a new record-breaking high for all time.

That's how highly everyone considers the latest sports extravaganza as put on by Sheldon Fairbanks.

MANY FAVORITES

Another huge crowd jammed Mechanics Building today to get a personal view of such well loved and appreciated showmen as Chief Needahbeh, the Penobscot Indian master of ceremonies who has been a long time favorite here in Boston; Buddy, the Seal, and offspring Neptune; Ora H. Kale and his springer spaniels; Paul Runyan, twice P. G. A. champion; Dave Irwin and the Ibionna Eskimo family from Cape Prince of Wales, and a group of crackerjack guides from Maine, New Hampshire and Nova Scotia.

One of the most likeable features of the Sportsmen's Show and the one that makes it closer to the hearts of every outdoor sports enthusiast than any other sports spectacle, is the easy informality, and the complete friendliness and neighborliness which reigns throughout the entire show.

FRIENDLY SPIRIT

Whether your favorite character is the ol' Port Clyde sea captain, Whit Thompson, who passes out clever wisecracks and doses of pert philosophy from his seat on a sawed off fish barrel; Elroy "Snood" Johnson, Will Rogers of the show; Long Tom Currier, custodian of Camp Otter in Pittsburgh, N. H., and a competing guide in the water contests; Bill Turgeon, Maine's only flying game warden; Maurice Hoffman, the deep sea fisherman, who hawls in canoes handled by two expert guides; or Sumner Towne, surf casting genius from Brookline, one and all are glad to stop and chat with anybody and everybody.

One-Day Strike Cost Santa Anita $60,000

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7 (AP)—The gates of Santa Anita Park, Southern California's $3,000,000 horse racing plant, swung open today for the resumption of business after a one-day strike of 1500 grooms (horse valets) that cost the park at least $60,000 and the State of California $28,000 in taxes.

The strike, effected dramatically yesterday a few minutes before the first race was scheduled, grew out of an altercation last Sunday, involving five of the grooms, who care for and feed the thoroughbreds.

Santa Anita stewards, saying that law and order must prevail within the confines of its establishment, took away the badge of one of the grooms, Jay Reynolds. Although the grooms are represented by no labor union, they were called together and decided to back up their suspended member.

While they were meeting they drew up a few more demands. They told the stewards they would have to be paid $10 for every winning horse they led to the paddock. They also demanded the privilege of sitting in the grandstand and placing bets in the grandstand mutuels.

HOLD MEETING SATURDAY

While the stewards conceded none of these points in a conference with the grooms last night, Barney Bentley, spokesman for the grooms, telephoned Jerry Giesler, California racing commission chairman, who is in New York, and obtained the temporary reinstatement of Reynolds.

Giesler told Bentley and Charles E. Cooper, representing the racing commission at the meeting, that he would fly here and preside over a Saturday morning meeting to arbitrate the disputed points. The grooms agreed to return to work today.

Many of the 20,000 persons gathered at Santa Anita yesterday were there to pay homage to Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, leading money winner of the turf.

A statue of Seabiscuit was unveiled and he was to lead the parade to the post in the feature race. The 'Biscuit will do that honor in today's main race, but will not run.

Approximately $10,000 had been wagered on yesterday's first race when the track had to cancel the program, refund admissions and parking fees, and forego its 6 per cent take from the betting handle. The sale of programs and a percentage of the concessions would have built up the park's daily net to about $60,000. The state gets a 4 per cent cut for revenue purposes.

Money. Don't ask friends. It's embarrassing. See the Money to Loan Ads in the Record-American.

MEADOWS EYES POLE VAULT RECORD

By HERB FINNIGAN

It doesn't seem long ago that Marc Wright of Dartmouth pole-vaulted 13 feet at Harvard Stadium to gain world-wide acclaim, and yet at the B. A. A. games in the Garden tomorrow night such a leap would draw nothing but groans.

In fact, some 12,000 enthusiasts will be disappointed if the boys are not imitating the fabulous cow by leaping over the moon.

Nobody yet has been able to equal saucy bossy's record, but every kid in the neighborhood is now breaking the mark set by Wright, and Earl Meadows, Kenny Dills et al will be eclipsing it by a foot and a half tomorrow.

Their goal will be Cornelius Warmerdam's indoor record of 14 feet, 6⅛ inches, made at the same B. A. A. games two years back.

GARDEN RUNWAY FASTEST

Meadows won the Olympic championship in 1936 and is intent on breaking one of Warmerdam's marks, either indoor or outdoor.

He's concentrating on the indoor record now, and jumped at the chance to compete in Boston because he maintains that the Garden runway is the fastest and best anywhere in the country for indoor vaulting.

Meadows is getting along now, and feels this may be his final chance to eclipse Warmy's record. He set that goal for himself after his victory at Millrose last week, and if competition will force him to a new mark, he'll get it.

He'll get it from a fellow Californian, Kenny Dills, who vaulted 14 feet 8 inches at Compton relays in California last spring, and who pushed Warmerdam to a new world outdoor record of 15 feet 1⅛ inches

Rampaging Olympics Visit Atlantic City

By SAM BROGNA

Having gone through their last three games without a defeat, Coach Hago Harrington's Olympics entrained this morning for Atlantic City, where they will attempt to stretch their undefeated string tonight against the Sea Gulls in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game.

Following the Sea Gulls' meeting, they will return to the Hub for a Sunday afternoon Garden contest with the River Vale Skeeters.

Once again, Coach Harrington will be shorthanded. Paul Guibord and Frankie Spain, two-thirds of his first line, were not able to accompany the team to Atlantic City because of business. Their places were taken by Al Carvelli and Junie Stubbs.

WALSH SCORES FIRST

With this duo out, he has been forced to make another change in his starting lineup. He has decided to start the second line of Gerry Desrosiers, Bob Jeremiah and Jack Costello.

The second wave will be made up of Dan Sullivan, the third member of his first line; Carvelli and Stubbs. Carvelli will center with Stubbs at right wing. The third line that worked so well last night against the Washington Eagles, will remain the same. Dave "Harpo" Walsh, who returned to action for the first time in weeks and scored the first Olympic goal, is at center flanked by Johnny Fitzgerald and Ed Barry.

Walsh will remain with the Pics for the rest of the season. He completed his course at Dartmouth a few days ago and passed the final exams which enables him to give most of his time to the locals.

Although they were unsuccessful in not only handling the Washington Eagles their fifth straight setback but also were unable to break the home ice with the Eagles, having yet to defeat the Washington team on Boston ice. Both clubs fought to a 3 to 3 overtime deadlock.

Classy Field Faces Connellan

Two of the classes which will carry great spectator appeal at Monday night's Diamond Belt amateur boxing championships at the Arena are the bantam and light heavyweight.

The Irish-American A. A., sponsor of the show, has the state champions in both classes on hand, Paul Connellan of Lowell and Lou Vivolo of the North End.

Connellan not only won the state title last month but copped the trophy which was awarded the outstanding performer of the night.

The hard-hitting young southpaw will seek to add further laurels Monday, but, star that he is, he faces no sinecure.

In the same class with him will be Paul Bang, 19-year-old Cambridge bricklayer and a former basketball player at Rindge Tech; Joe Landry, chairmaker from Gardner, who held the New England junior 112-pound championship a year ago, and Eddie Spirdione of Lawrence.

Vivolo, who copped the state 175-pound championship in his first venture among the light heavies, also faces sterling competition.

'Both Barrels' Hit Dodgers, But Bill Corum Hits Back

the boys, particularly the rookies and bench warmers, have it too soft and not the reverse.

Every good ball player wants to be in the game. He wouldn't be a good player if he didn't. Thus, as soon as he has been in camp a couple of days and run around the park two or three times, he wants to get out there at his regular position and stay out there.

Aside from the player's pride, it's an excellent way of keeping an understudy from jumping and grabbing a lot of spotlight. Maybe too much.

From the manager's standpoint, it is also a good idea to get the team to functioning as a unit as soon as possible. The result is that many a recruit gets a joy ride South. With the Dodgers the expression joy ride is particularly apt, too.

You may think from that distance that MacPhail sounds like old Simon Legree Larry, but that's because you haven't seen how our noble Brooklyns live.

They fly through the air with the greatest of ease, chipper in their clippers, and no group of millionaires ever traveled any more first cabin. Their base hotel, the Hotel Nacional de Cuba, in Havana, should give you a rough idea that they do anything but rough it.

WHY, JACK, even the lucky guys who write baseball and, therefore, know only the champagne and caviar side of the sporting life, have become such ardent Dodger fans this spring that they all but break down and cry when Brooklyn is mentioned in the presence of their sports editors.

Yes, as I said at the outset, the basic idea is to put on a big show. One that will attract attention. That, basically, is what MacPhail is, a great showman. And he seldom misses.

B. C. to Get Bowl Trophy Sunday

Sixteen members of the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association, sponsors of the annual Sugar Bowl clash, are expected to be present when the Boston College Varsity Club honors Head Coach Frank Leahy, his assistants and his 42-man Eagle grid squad Sunday night at the Statler.

Abe N. Goldberg, outgoing president of the New Orleans group, heads the Southern party which with some 1800 others will attend the Varsity Club's annual party to the grid heroes.

HOLD TROPHY FOR YEAR

The delegation from the deep South will arrive in Boston Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The Southerners, who are making the 1600-mile trek for the specific purpose of paying tribute to the greatest team ever to play in their Bowl, will be in Boston until late Tuesday night. Their headquarters will be the Statler.

The New Orleans group will present the famed sterling silver Sugar Bowl to Boston College officials Sunday night. This trophy is to be kept for one year. Before the next Sugar Bowl clash the trophy will be shipped back to New Orleans. In exchange Boston College will receive an exact replica which it will retain permanently.

GIFTS FOR PLAYERS

Gold footballs, suitably inscribed, will be presented to the grid squad by the Sugar Bowl committee Sunday night. The gridders will also receive watches from the Varsity Club and the lettermen will receive sweaters or jackets—which ever they desire—from the B. C. A. A.

Brother Peter, president of St. Stanislaus College, Bay St. Louis, Miss., where the Boston College squad trained for the Sugar Bowl clash, will also be a guest at the Sunday night affair. Brother Peter will arrive in Boston early tomorrow afternoon.

16 CUBS STILL UNSIGNED

LAST CHANCE TO ENTER SILVER SKATES DERBY

at the national championships in Fresno last summer.

And if this pair isn't enough to create a new mark, it may come from Dick Ganslen, former intercollegiate champion from Columbia, who won the vault here last year at 14 feet 3 inches, or from Howard Jensen of Philadelphia, who won the event at the Prout games with a vault of 14 feet.

FANS LIKE VAULTING

Pole vaulting is the one field event that still holds spectator appeal far more than the high jump. In the old days, the standing high jump and the shotput used to be on every big indoor program, but they have faded into practical obscurity.

The vaults is the only field event which draws those "Oo-ohs" and "Ah-h-s" from the spectators, and when a boy finally clears his mark after a couple of vain attempts no outburst of enthsiasm is more spontaneous or more vociferous. It's been everybody's favorite from Marc Wright's day down through Sabin Carr, Keith Brown and the rest, and everybody will get his share of thrills from it tomorrow night.

Practically all the big shots will be competing tonight in the Penn A. G. games, but that won't affect their running here tomorrow. A good campaigner can compete several times a week and still retain his edge. Remember Nurmi's famous indoor tour in 1925?

For the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, Harvard and Yale will not be meeting in the windup relay tomorrow. Harvard has a dual meet with Army at West Point, and will not enter a team.

ENTRIES CLOSE FRIDAY, FEB. 7

By WALTER KILEY

Tolling of tonight's midnight hour brings to an end the time for filing entry in this year's Silver Skates Derby. By tomorrow the lists will be complete and the huge task of drawing up heats and starting times and numbering the many hundreds of New England speed skating participants will be under way.

Just one last chance remains to those few skaters who have waited for the last minute. There is still a brief bit of time left to become a member of the Silver Skates party on the grand Boston Garden occasion of Sunday afternoon, Feb. 16.

Letters postmarked not later than midnight tonight will be accepted by the Derby editor. Others mailed later must be refused.

No more warnings, Silver Skaters. There have been sufficient to date. This is the zero hour, and it's now up to you—TODAY.

FIFTY FROM FITCHBURG

Today's mails brought in a deluge of entries. The Working Boys' Home of Newton Highlands came in strong with a batch of some 25 midgets and juveniles back for their third crack at the handsome Derby prizes.

Then came a grand lineup of boy and girl skaters from the famous Mirror Lake Skating Club of Fitchburg, almost a half-hundred strong. The entry was filed by Aime La Fosse, president of the club.

The Mirror Lake Club is one of the outstanding skating organizations in New England. It produced Carmelita Landry, newly crowned women's national and North American speed skating champion, who is also club secretary.

Mirror Lake, which was founded by President La Fosse in the fall of 1939, captured the team trophy last year and is intent on repeating next week.

5000 Skiers Jam Dartmouth Trails

By TAP GOODENOUGH

Five thousand skis will schuss and flash through swirling snow today and tomorrow at Hanover, N. H., in the 31st annual Dartmouth Winter Carnival.

Most of the hickories will be donned by non-competitors, the under-grads and the gals they invited up to this snow show from colleges all over the coutry.

Gorgeous gals galore, indeed, will dominate the skiing scene all vieing for the coveted title of "Carnival Queen" . . . Massive statues hewn from ice decorate the campus . . . The nights are cut by the clear voices of youth, as sport and gayety merge at this greatest of collegiate carnivals.

Over 90 individual skiers will represent the 10 teams from four nations in the exciting carnival ski meet . . . Lads from Chile, U. of Wisconsin, McGill and an eight-man ski team from the Royal Norwegian Air Force now stationed at Toronto, Canada . . . New Hampshire, Middlebury, Harvard, Vermont and Norwich also are aiming for victory.

Coach Walter Prager has named the Green ski team which will defend its title. Capt. Charlie McLane will lead Spif Little, Alec Salm, Don Worden, Jim Page, Jack Tobin, Roge Simpter and Bob Mesarvey against the invaders . . . The cross-country race may determine the outcome of the meet . . . Wah hoo wah!

DOWNHILL DOINGS

Capers at the Commonwealth Country Club continue tonight with another weekly winter sports fest directed by Bill Eagleson, Oscar Cyr ski school assistant.

Ski experts will give exhibitions of jumping through flaming hoops, and a dance, open to all skiers, will be run in the clubhouse. The ski tow there operates day and night . . . Incidentally, bring your best girl! A snow queen is chosen every Friday night.

The only sanctioned ski jumping meet to be held in eastern Massachusetts this year will take place.

Sponsored by the Inniton Ski Runners, there will be two jumping classes, one for leapers up to 18 years of age, and the other to be known as Class "B," which is for veterans. Leaps of 115 feet and more have been made on this hill.

In Vermont, the Fiske Trophy slalom will be contested at Woodstock on the famous Suicide Six Hill, under the auspices of the Woodstock Ski Runners.

The state of Maine ski championships will be decided this week-end at the Rumford Winter Carnival . . . A great variety of events will spice the menu here.

New Hampshire's date book is filled again for Saturday and Sunday . . . A Winter Mardi Gras at Keene includes a four-event interscholastic ski meet for the N. H. championships . . . Four other carnivals are on the card: One at Antrim under the Outing Club; another at Plymouth for the Teachers' College; Concord's Carnival, with a four-event ski meet; and the Teneriff Outing Club affair at Milton.

SKI SCOOP

Results of the Women's downhill race on the Uncanoonuc Mt. ski trail at Goffstown, N. H., last Sunday were not publicly announced for some reason . . . The winner, we discovered, was Libby Till, USEASA member, racing unattached. She negotiated the twisting course in 2 minutes and 22 seconds, good time. Second was Blanche McLane of the Schussverein Club, sister of Charlie McLane, Dartmouth ski team captain. Nine girls finished in this race . . . This contest marked the first downhill race in which Libby Till had ever competed . . . Nice going!

FRANCONIA FLASHES

Class B runners, subject to the approval of the race committee, will be allowed to enter the USEASA downhill and slalom championships on Cannon Mt., Feb. 15 and 16, which were formerly limited to Class A racers . . . All entries must reach Paul O'Neill at Franconia not later than noon of Feb. 12.

The Chilean ski team will come to Franconia Feb. 11 to 15 and make their rendezvous at Lovett's.

The brilliant suggestion of holding a medley race on skis is now taking shape for sometime in March on Cannon Mt. . . . The plan is to conduct a giant slalom from the observation platform atop the mountain to the base of the Taft slalom course . . . Then a skier climbs to the top of the Taft Saddle.

From this point, another skier takes the baton and races downhill over the Coppermine and part of the Tucker Brook trails and hands the baton to a cross-country skier, who finishes at the valley near McKenzies and the Thorner House.

The entire course would measure about four miles and require some 45 minutes for the four-man teams to complete it! . . . Remember: the Tramway on Cannon Mt. runs every day.

SKI SCRIBBLINGS

Arnold C. Black, skiing artist and head of the night advertising art department of the Record and American, has just won second prize in the U. S. Eastern Amateur-Ski Association's poster contest . . . The first award went to C. O. Sacks, Jr., Larchmont, N. Y.; third place being won by Lois Lehnig of Arcola, N. J.

To the winner goes one week's lessons in the Sepp Ruschp Ski School at Stowe, Vt. . . . Second prize consists of a 30-mile ride book on the Cannon Mt. tram, and the third winner receives a 10-ride book on the Mt. Mansfield chair lift.

The eight best posters will be displayed at the Dartmouth Carnival this week-end, then going to the North Station in Boston, New York, Stowe, Vt., Pico Peak, Cannon Mt., and other spots.

The Winter Carnival of the Berkshire Hills Conference is going to be celebrated at the 31 skiing areas of the Berkshires this Saturday and Sunday.

LAST DAY TO ENTER ICE DERBY

senior championships. Last year Clarence was just nosed out by Alex, his brother. Ernest Mathieu and Raymond Thibodeau will be speedy contenders in the intermediate division, Raymond having won in the junior division a year ago.

Albert Landry, Carmelita's young brother, will be a boy to watch in the junior division. He's intent on equalling sister's record.

Bertha Jena placed third in the girls' intermediates last year and intends to make her second bid a winning one. Eddie Robichaud, who has won his every start this winter, is a heavy favorite for boys' midget honors.

FATHER, 2 SONS ENTERED

Lew Hall, president of the Rhode Island Skating Club of Providence, got in well under the wire with his usual solid front of formidable title contenders.

President Hall will skate himself and so will his two tiny youngsters, Lew Hall, Jr., and Robert, the latter the tot who stole the show two years ago, when, aged seven, he got away to a fast start only to land on the seat of his childish trousers.

Seeing that past Silver Skates senior winners automatically become ineligible for future Derby titles, the Rhode Island Skating Club's grown-up ranks have been hard hit. But in Helen Malloney, the Providence club has a girl who is said to boast the fastest get-away in women's ranks.

BIRTH CERTIFICATE

Early next week cards of instructions and competitors' tickets will be sent to all Derby participants. They will be asked to report at Boston Gardens no later than 12:30 noon one week from Sunday.

In any case or cases where there is the least doubt as to the ages of prize winners in the midget, junior, juvenile and intermediate divisions, these winners will be required to show birth certificates to prove their ages and the prizes held up until such proof has been made.

Should any in these classes look to be older than they actually are, it would be to their best interests to bring such a birth certificate along with them.

THIS IS ABSOLUTELY THE LAST WARNING. NO ENTRIES WILL BE ACCEPTED WHICH ARENT IN TODAY'S MAILS.
